Hong Kong's Time Running Out

By AP Newsfeatures

Time is running out for the British crown colony of Hong Kong, no matter what the outcome of China's current campaign to cow it.

The basic fact is that most of the colony's real estate -- the New Territories across the harbor from Hong Kong island -- is under a 99-year lease from China, a lease that ends just 30 years from now. As things look this year, there is scant chance the lease will be renewed.

Hong Kong is under the same sort of pressure that brought the Portuguese colony of Macao to its knees earlier this year. The British however, have reacted differently. Although there is no question but that Chinese armed forces could overrun the colony out of hand, the British have indicated they will insist on their right to maintain order.

The confrontation stemmed from the arrest this month of nearly 400 Chinese who rioted in the Kowloon district. Thereafter the Peking government demanded release of the prisoners, punishment for the officials who had put them in custody, and apologies. The British - would have none of it.

Their position is far stronger than their physical strength might indicate. Hong Kong buys vast food supplies from China and provides the Peking government with foreign exchange estimated at half a billion dollars or more annually. This is China's main source of hard currency and something that, in all logic, she would not want to do without. Whether internal pressures and politics might cause her to disregard such practical considerations is something else again.

Facing up to the Chinese dragon is the British governor general, Sir David Trench, an executive council and a legislative council. Sir David's 20,000 armed police and soldiers should be able to keep under control mobs of the magnitude seen thus far, however little they might do against a Chinese army.

They guard one of the finest harbors in the world, through which flows $2.6 billion in trade annually. Hong Kong manufactures a great variety of objects, especially clothing and textiles, and is a trading post for the world.

Its booming economy might very well be affected, however, by the hot breath of China's displeasure.

Britain has been doing business at this crossroad for a century and a quarter. She got title to Hong Kong itself in 1840 after the Opium war in which she established her right, no longer exercised, to trade in the drug. Following the hiatus of Japanese occupation in World War II, and the economic disruption of the Korean war, the colony has come on strong, and now numbers about 3.9 million residents. Of these, 98 per cent are of Chinese extraction, although more than half are British subjects by birth. A million are refugees or immigrants from Red China since the war.

Egypt Declines To Act

By ROY ESSOYAN

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Egypt was reported today to have taken the position that it has achieved its objectives in its military confrontation with Israel and if there is to be war Israel will have to start it.

At the same time, the Soviet Union said it was up to the United States, Britain and other Western powers to restrain Israel.

A Soviet government spokesman said in Moscow the Kremlin has no doubts Egypt and Syria are doing their utmost to keep peace in the Middle East.

"Our understanding is that the source of tension is Israel," the spokesman said. "We believe it is for the United States, Britain and other Western powers to use their influence, to exert their influence on Israel to make it stop its provocations. This will be a real contribution to peace."

The Egyptian position was reported in the semiofficial Cairo newspaper Al Ahram by Mohamed Hassanian Heikal, who often reflects the political think-

SKETCH OF THE Shady Acres Church of Christ, to be built at 1440 Ables Road, on a 11-acre site. The building is scheduled to be completed Nov. 1.

First Earth Turned For Church Building

Construction of the Shady Acres Church of Christ, began Thursday, following ground breaking at 11 a.m. Don C. Glover is the minister.

The church, costing $180,000 will be at 1440 Ables Road, in the southeast part of the city, on a 11 - acre lot. Contractors are the Industrial Builders of Texas, Inc., Lubbock, with R.C. Kennedy, superintendent of construction.

The building will have a 136-foot frontage, facing on Ables Road, with a width of 143 feet. The main auditorium will seat 533.

The building will have 23 classrooms for Sunday School, a fellowship room for 125, church office, nursery, minister's study and three rest rooms. It will be centrally heated and air conditioned.

Present for the groundbreaking were the minister, Don C. Glover, elders of the church, city officials and the congregation.

The building will replace the church at 602 South Kingshighway, built in 1946. The first Church of Christ building was erected in 1928 near the present location. The old building will be sold.

The present minister came to Sikeston in 1962.

100 City Employes Attend Banquet

City employes and board members of the city departments were treated to a free meal Thursday night at the Holiday Inn.

About 100 city representatives and guests attended.

The program consisted of a welcome by Mayor Kendall Sikes and introduction of the city employes and representatives by Mrs. Ann Elliott, secretary to the city manager. Mrs. Elliott and Miss Linda Rowland, Chamber of Commerce secretary, were hostesses.

Entertainment was provided by Roger Tolliver, who sang "Somewhere My Love" and "Till There was You," and Bob Williamson, pianist, who played "Alley Cat" and "I Left My Heart in San Francisco."

Sickal to City Court Judgeship

James D. Sickal, 221 Ruth, has been appointed municipal judge effective June 1, City Manager W. Raymert Miller announced today.

He succeeds Judge Erwin R. Schrader who served seven years, before his death Saturday.

Sickal was born in Clarence. He graduated from the University of Missouri with a doctor of law degree in 1962. He has been associated with the law firm of Blanton, Blanton and Rice one year.

He previously was associated with a law firm in Cape Girardeau.

W. L. George served the position in Judge Schrader's absence.

Northern Lights Viewed in Area

The aurora borealis, rarely seen in Southeast Missouri; presented a dazzling display of luminous red streams of lights accompanied by a few observable bursts Thursday night to Sikeston residents.

The northern lights were observed as far south as Memphis. They should appear again tonight and Saturday night in the northern skies.

The phenomenon occurs only in the summer in the United States.

Graduation Day Sad At Juda Hospital

The first 16 were boys.

"You never can forget," said Donna Lehr, the class secretary. "It keeps coming back. Like Baccalaureate. We marched through the door and you see all the boys. Just boys. Then the girls in a small group.

"There's just you and six others.

On the agenda will be election of a temporary chairman, selecting a name for the commission, and a temporary By-laws committee.

Senior Party Once Problem Becomes Community Asset

By Barbara Lacy

For once, the girls aren't required to be home by midnight, or even one o'clock. The boys either.

Rather, it's assumed that they'll be out until after breakfast tomorrow morning.

That's right, out all night at the annual high school graduation party.

The party is a happy 10 year tradition now. It began after several years of serious automobile accidents involving seniors, graduation night. At that time there was no organized activity, most of the graduates went out in cars, party hopping or looking for something to do. A group of parents decided that the students shouldn't have to look for something to do, there should be something to do.

And so it began as the parents gift to the senior class. At first it was held in Sikeston, then, about three years ago, in a Paducah night club with the seniors raising the money themselves.

This year the club was unavailable as were clubs and halls in other nearby towns, so once again the party was scheduled for

POOR CHARLIE SAYS!

The hearing conducted by the Delta Area Economic Corporation board into the dismissal of Lloyd Phillips and Bill Graves as assistant directors tell a lot about the war on poverty that isn't flattering.

Basically it describes the difficulty in launching a shotgun effort to reduce poverty.

Clyde S. Cahill Jr., attorney for The Office of Economic Opportunity, chided the board for its failure to agree. This is a peculiar position in which an attorney has been placed. The board was divided 12-12 on a motion to reinstate the two after a long controversy during which their usefulness has been impaired.

How does any bureaucrat bring about agreement? It is the nature of human beings to look at things differently and to disagree - the Great Society notwithstanding.

President Lyndon B. Johnson has made the concensus work on numerous occasions in Washington but it is the subject of some legitimate reservation and criticism. Just how do you produce the "uniform voice" that Cahill recommends among people who do not see alike? Admittedly the board of loggerheads does produce problems.

Why was the board established in such a way as to encourage deadlock? Why wasn't it composed of an odd number of directors so that if all were present a majority decision could be reached?

The anti-poverty program was a politically inspired, hurry-up-job designed to change conditions that are as old as man and have been years abuilding.

If a rifle had been used instead of a shotgun, much of the grief in the administration of the program in Southeast Missouri and elsewhere in the country could have been avoided.

When the funds became available performance standards were negligible. The program was loosely designed. It's a wonder that it could function at all in the absence of blueprint. A patchwork, crazy quilt has been applied to a need that required careful research, meticulous planning and expert administration in order to be effective. The poverty program had none of these.

It is no wonder that chaos has resulted.

Questions and answers at the Portageville hearing eloquently tell the story of the confusion that naturally resulted.

It is obvious that the federal government is depending on threatened withdrawal of anti-poverty funds to produce a desired concensus or as Cahill describes it "the uniform voice" so much desired by the bureaucrats.

Whether this arm twising, ramrod, pappa knows best approach will produce flexibility and a cooperative spirit remains to be seen. If it does it will be a departure from history and against human nature as revealed in the immediate past.

There may be no Head Start without a new start.

Given a new program with the new board and new administration the Bootheel war on poverty might get off the ground.

Three times should be a charm.

If chief Thomason shuts off the money because the local committee refuses to reinstate his appointees we'll bet that the local committee can get it reinstated.

Memorial Day signals the beginning of the busiest driving season of the year. There will be more traffic on the road from now until Labor Day than during any other three-month period. Vacations, picnics, just-out-for-a-ride trips, and other summer-time travel will crowd our highways, often beyond their engineered capabilities.

Just the sheer numbers of cars add to the possibility of more accidents. According to the National Safety Council, accident possibilities increase not by the number of cars added to a driving situation but to the square of the number of cars added. If four cars are added, for example, the accident possibility increases by 16, not four.

The one best way people can protect themselves from the highway hazards that go with the warm weather is to drive defensively. Defensive driving is much more than a catchy, alliterative name. It's a method of driving wherein the driver anticipates problems and then takes positive action to avoid the problem.

The best way to learn how to drive defensively is to enroll in a defensive driving course of the type that is available throughout the country.

When a consumer reads an advertisement and seeks out the publicized good for purchase, he is working for free enterprise.

When an editor consents to publish an advertisement, he is aiding the public. When the businessman places an advertisement, he consciously or unconsciously helps to build a better free economy.

Our society is interdependent - that is, it takes many persons and organizations to keep it operating freely and efficiently.

One of the constructive aspects of American society is the institution of advertising. Of course, advertising helps to provide mass distribution and mass production of goods. It results in lower prices for consumers. But it does more than that. It helps keep America free.

Countries in which little or no advertising take place are generally underdeveloped. Most offer little choice of goods for the public. The upsurge in economic activity and amount of luxury goods for sale go hand in hand with advertising. Japan and West Germany are good examples.

Newspapers provide a sounding board for concerned citizens who want to "do their part" to keep America free. Advertisements contribute by supporting a free press.

The backbone of fighters for freedom is and always has been the local newspaper. The press could not retain this role without the financial support which keeps the newspaper free from special pressures.

A miniature town for tiny tots in Mansfield, Ohio, is paying big dividends in the realm of traffic safety.

Since 1937, when "Safety Town" was established to teach safe pedestrian and driving practices to kindergartners and first graders, not one injury or death has been reported among Mansfield children going to and from school on foot.

"Traffic and pedestrian safety as learned by these youngsters is outstanding," according to George H. Calhoun, retired field representative of the Ohio Industrial Commission's Division of Safety and Hygiene. He is a chief sponsor of Safety Town.

Safety Town, located on the schoolground, is a black-topped site that looks like a small village, complete with miniature buildings, marked-out streets, sidewalks, pedestrian crossings and traffic control signs.

Moppets are taught safe traffic habits by being divided into pedestrians and "motorists" who drive on tricycles or in miniature cars.

The program of training at Safety Town, held during the summer and conducted by qualified high school graduates and college students, consists of two parts - classroom instruction in traffic essentials and practical exercises on the streets of Safety Town.

In the classroom, children are taught how to recognize the colors of a traffic signal and what drivers and pedestrians should do when encountering one. Drivers are instructed to stop before reaching the crosswalk, to yield the right of way to pedestrians, to avoid hitting pedestrians even if they are jaywalking.

Pedestrians are taught to wait on curbs while cars go by, to watch for cars in both directions while crossing, to respect traffic signs.

These lessons - including proper hand signals for drivers - are then put into practice - but not without mishap. Violations are similar to those of adults, including failure to stop at red lights and turning from the wrong lane. Offenders are ticketed and their driving privileges are suspended for a time, allowing pedestrians to become motorists.

Beating the boss at gin rummy.

Opening a door and finding on the other side someone you long have wanted to see.

A letter from an old mother saying that everyone back home is doing fine — and so is her flower garden.

Counting the blooms on a lilac bush.

The stunning silence, louder than noise, that suddenly falls on a battlefield when all firing ceases.

The arms-around-shoulders singing of "Auld Lang Syne" at a farewell meeting of men who have fought a war together and know that the peace they won will not separate them forever. Nothing in the world is quite as wistful as that feeling that the price of their victory is the loss of their unity.

Hearing the eager footsteps of someone running gladly to meet you in the dark.

Going window shopping on Fifth Avenue in Manhattan on a lovely summer day, when all the important people have fled to the country.

Listening to an orthodontist say that his overhaul of your young daughter's teeth won't be as extensive — or expensive as you feared.

The relief at learning that an operation of a long-time friend discovered no malignancy.

Standing under a waterfall, and imagining that it is washing away every guilt you've known since you punched the snooty nose of the jeering 5-year-old young lady who beat you at hop scotch in kindergarten.

Strolling in the city at twilight past the open window of an apartment wherein a sweet-voiced woman is playing the piano and singing some old tune, such as "Come Where My Love Lies Dreaming."

Being asked to make an assembly speech by the principal who once threatened to throw you out of high school for cutting capers in study hall.

Getting a $15 raise when your wife had insisted only that you demand $7.50 more.

Watching with a child the flash of a falling star, and making a silent wish that the child would grow up in a finer world than mankind has ever enjoyed before.

Was It Sudden?

PEOPLE NEED PEOPLE

The song I liked best in the hit musical "Funny Girl" is the one that contains the line, "People who need people are the luckiest people in the world."

That man is lucky indeed who discovers that needing people adds immeasurably to the richness of life. People need people to share their joys and sorrows, their triumphs and defeats. For it is in the sharing of such experiences that we are drawn close together in understanding and love.

I like these words from the writings of Elbert Hubbard: "My heart goes out to you, O man, because I cannot conceive of any being greater, nobler, more heroic, more tenderly loving, loyal, unselfish and enduring than are you. All the love I know is man's love. All the forgiveness I know is man's forgiveness. All the sympathy I know is man's sympathy. The fact that you are a human being brings me near to you. It is a bond that unites us. I understand you because you are a part of myself."

A man alone is incomplete. It is only through others that he finds fulfillment. People need people.

SIXTY-FIVE DAYS TO GO

Representative Edward J. Gurney of Florida has introduced a Resolution in Congress which would designate May 1 as a day of celebration. But, the odds are that government leaders would rather not call the significance of this day to the public's attention.

Regardless of that, Representative Gurney's Resolution has merit. It would hail May 1 as "National Tax Freedom Day". It is the first day of the year that people begin working for themselves. From January 1 until April 30, every dollar the taxpayer earns belongs to the government, he must pay it out in federal, state, or local taxes. In the words of Representative Gurney, "This is simply another way of saying that the average American's tax load is costing him one-third of his income, or 33 cents out of every dollar he earns. Certainly, this day of relief throughout the land deserves to be marked appropriately, and the bill I propose would do this by giving it the status of a national holiday."

As Congress votes more billions to further the ideology of the welfare state, National Tax-Freedom Day will move forward on the calendar. When it reaches July 4, there will no longer be any reason to celebrate American independence. There won't be any.

HAVE A HAPPY
TAX-TIME TRIP!

One of the things that hadn't been said about the Johnson Administration was that its Commerce Department is suffering from a split-personality syndrome and billboard schizophrenia.

This oversight has now been remedied.

Rep. William C. Cramer of Florida has pointed ou to his colleagues in the House that at the very time the Commerce Department's Economic Development Administration is busily putting up roadside signs to plug its projects, the department's Bureau of Public Roads is just as busily drafting regulations to eliminate roadside signs.

And no sooner had he voiced his views than the Internal Revenue Service announced it is gratefully accepting an offer by the Outdoor Advertising Association of America to use 4,000 empty billboards to remind motorists and others that -- ho, ho -- its' time to send in those little old income tax returns.

Those li'l ol' tax reminders aren't likely to win friends or influence voters for LBJ and his administration.

LOVE THAT FORM 1040

Americans may not be aware of it, but each spring they participate in a major historical miracle: Each April they voluntarily surrender to faceless bureaucrats in Washington a substantial portion of their annual incomes.

To be sure, most of them during the intervening year make involuntary contributions by way of payroll deductions. But even here, the withholding tax is a voluntary act since it was voted by elected legislators.

"The power to tax is the power to destroy" is a well-known aphorism, and throughout human history it has been true. In every age, taxation has been a weapon of oppression and a source of corruption. How is it that Americans have devised systems of taxation which its administrator hails as the most efficient and widely supported the world has ever known?

According to Sheldon S. Cohen, commissioner of Internal Revenue, the fundamental honesty of the American taxpayer is the key. Last year the government indicted fewer than 2,000 out of the 102 million taxpayers for fraud. It took in $100 billion voluntarily, as opposed to $3 billion through direct enforcement efforts.

Another reason, says Cohen, is the confidence of the people in the system. They believe that the tax laws are reasonably fair and are being administered honestly and even-handedly.

"We tend to take this compliance for granted," he says, "but it is really quite remarkable. Very few countries, including those in the Western family of nations, can successfully administer a mass income tax."

Actually, it is only since the beginning of World War II that it has become a mass tax. In its first year, 1913, the income tax affected a mere one per cent of the population.

No one likes to pay taxes; no one ever will. But Americans have come closer to liking it than any other people on earth. Perhaps it is because what they really like is the kind of country their money buys.

H.L. Hunt Says

PRESTIGE OF ELECTORS

Under the Congressional District Plan for reform of the Electoral College system, the prestige of men and women chosen as Electors would be greatly increased. Major political parties would necessarily nominate the best available candidates, who could give one or two days every four years to cast their votes for President of the United States.

Four - fifths of these Electors would serve the voters of districts averaging about 400,000 population. The qualifications and attributes of the candidate for Electors would be quite well known to the voters of his district. In the case of Electors from the state at large, they would be as well known as candidates for governor and other state offices.

The high caliber of candidates for Elector would make them useful in a number of capacities during the campaign. Certainly they would contribute to the reputation of their party and its precepts and principles. They also would add to the acceptability of every party candidate for offices from constable to President.

Their standing would lend added prestige to all members of their party serving in office or who had previously served. Conversely, party members in office would feel a responsibility to the candidate for presidential Elector chosen in a truly democratic way and in turn responsible for the continuation of our Republic as a form of government.

The present system makes mere straw men of Electors. Their names are omitted from the ballot in many states. But with the District Plan in effect they could make a continuing contribution of great value to the nation. HLH.

Washington Merry-Go-Round

By Drew Pearson

WASHINGTON -- The last time Sen. Tom Dodd was invited to the White House for a private tete - a - tete, President Johnson asked him to pass a message to Otto Otepka. Dodd dictated a private memo on the visit.

The senator from Connecticut had eagerly accepted classified documents which Otepka had filched from state department files. When the department tried to discipline its errant employee, Dodd defended Otepka for raiding the files and informing on his superiors.

Cowed by Dodd, the state department kept Otepka on the payroll. Even the President was timid about taking action against Otepka. Sen. Dodd reporting on his White House visit, said in the memo:

"He (LBJ) then started to talk about Otepka. He said he wanted to get a message to Otepka through a third party that he wanted to straighten this matter out. He said, 'I want Otepka to step out of the department and then we will do something good for him'."

But Otepka, protected by Dodd, didn't accept the President's proposition. Dodd's power was such that the man who had slipped him documents out of security files is still drawing his regular salary.

The senator howled a different tune, however, after damaging documents from his own files were turned over to this column. What was good for Otepka, Dodd angrily concluded, was not good for the employees who trifled with his files. The senator hounded them in their new jobs and got most of them fired.

GOP SMEAR IRKS LBJ

The President, after getting the message to Otepka off his chest, gave Dodd another message to deliver to Sen. Jim Eastland, D - Miss., recorded Dodd in the memo on the visit:

"The President thought it was significant that the Republicans are starting to say that he is soft on Communism. He thought I should speak to Eastland and then he said to me, 'you know I am not soft on Communism. I will show them who is soft.' I told him I understood and that I knew he knew that".

Otherwise the White House visit, which, of course, occurred before Dodd's improprieties hit the headlines, was occupied with dogs, politics and praise. Here are other excerpts from Dodd's memo:

"He (the President) said to me, 'I haven't seen the dogs yet.' He then proceeded to step out onto the porch and call the dogs. He finally coaxed them into the office and proceeded to pick up Him by the ears. I mentioned the publicity associated with this, and he said that the dogs had been frightened by the photographers and that it did not hurt them. There was also a big white collie dog there, but he didn't pay any attention to this dog.

"The President then ordered some coffee and we talked. He spoke of his visit to Connecticut (his appearance on Oct. 26, 1963, at a Dodd testimonial). He said it was one of the most interesting days he had spent.

"He asked me about the political situation in Connecticut, and I told him what I thought of it. . . He then said, 'let's talk about that judgeship.' I told him of the situation, and he said he agreed with me. He said, 'however, I don't think you have two good candidates there. I hear neither one can get approved by the bar.' He said, 'get me a good Italian-American candidate or I will have to name Anderson.' (He subsequently named Judge Robert Anderson to the court of appeals.')

KUDOS EXCHANGED

"I told him (LBJ) that he was looking pretty well, better than he looked when I saw him. He said, 'some people say I should take it easy. Don't tell anyone, but I sleep every afternoon'.

"The President knew I had said something about Harry Truman on the floor of the senate. He said that it was a good statement. He then remarked, 'you are going to get famous. You have nominated two men who have become Presidents.' He thought this was very unusual. I replied that perhaps it would be my claim to fame. . .

"Then the President said, 'we have got to go up to the Hill,' I said that I had my car outside, but he said, 'no, you come with me.'

"We drove up to the Hill. He was very effusive and said I was a great friend and how everlasting grateful he was and so on and we sort of exchanged compliments at this point.

"When we got to the Hill, there was a crowd. The President wondered how it was that people always knew he was coming. So we bade each other goodbye, and he said he would see me next week. He asked his chauffeur to take me to my office, but I told the chauffeur he had better not, in case the President needed his car in a hurry. He agreed with me."

Not long afterward, Tom Dodd came under fire for conduct unbecoming a senator. He was never invited back to the White House.

ROBIN CRUSOE

Boyishly handsome Rep. Don Riegle, R-Mich., will go to almost any length to oblige a voter.

An excited woman phoned him from Michigan the other day to ask his help in reaching her sister, who was vacationing on a sparsely inhabited desert island off the California coast. The island was so obscure that it had no phones, and no one knew its name.

With the help of the coast guard, Riegle not only located the island but had a cutter dispatched to fetch the girl to the nearest phone.

Inside Labor

By Victor Riesel

EXCLUSIVE Reuther Reported Preparing To Back Peace Party in '68.

Some of the few who recently have talked with the embattled auto union leader report that he is slowly, methodically and quietly maneuvering so he can stay neutral or back a "peace ticket" in '68.

This would smash a 20-year alliance which traces back to the President's first Senate race. Yet the evidence of Reuther's defection is equally as traceable by insiders.

The Detroiter's first move was to refuse to pay his big union's quota of dollars into the AFL-CIO coast - to - coast political network known as COPE (Committee on Political Education). Generally the United Auto Workers contributes about $100,000 annually, on the record, to COPE.

By springtime each year, the UAW has steadily thrown in at least $25,000 of this political action contribution.

But not this year. Not a centime. This financial boycott comes at a time when COPE is beginning early to whip into gear the machinery its leaders believe necessary to reelect Mr. Johnson -- in one of the toughest campaigns any incumbent has ever contemplated. AFL - CIO president George Meany, who gives COPE all the finances and encouragement he can, already has endorsed the President for reelection.

But Walter Reuther has not, though the last UAW Constitutional convention ordered every one of the union's 1264 locals to organize a Citizenship Committee and coordinate it with an Area UAW Citizenship Council. In turn, these units have been ordered to organize -- among the elders, the retirees and especially the young members -- on a "ward, precinct, and block -by-block neighborhood organization."

Couple this with Reuther's drive for "community unions" and one begins to perceive the scope of an independent national political machine which could swing into action in '68.

True, Walter Reuther has as many projects as Peking has wall posters, but these projects generally are reserved for his inspirational public speeches. He must be interpreted by what he does -- or does not -- actually activate.

And he has not ever endorsed President Johnson's Vietnam war policy. To the contrary, in many areas his union and many of his colleagues have been in the avantgarde of the laborite peace movement.

And though one of his recent statements received virtually no national publicity, Reuther himself did take a scathing swing at the administration. Early in May, in Florida, at the United Shoe Workers convention, Reuther said that when it comes to the war in Vietnam, or any other war, the "reactionaries" spend billions of dollars with pleasure, but when it comes to social work, they give it a drop in the ocean.

This was reported to President Johnson, who did not exactly place it amidst his most loved collection of quotations. But Reuther does not appear disturbed by the President's displeasure.

Until recently, the auto union leader must have been worried by any move which might disaffect Mr. Johnson and provoke him into closing the White House door to Reuther during the auto negotiations. These begin July 6. But Reuther and his intimates now seem quite confident that they shall overcome the auto industry "by October" without Mr. Johnson's help -- and win a big pay increase for their skilled workers, white collar people and a guaranteed work year for those who now are paid by the hour.

Then the Reuther battle timetable calls for conferring with the AFL-CIO high council, making demands on this high command, losing this fight and then going to the national AFL - CIO convention in Florida next December. There will come the final conflict. The UAW, of course, expects to lose. Then insiders believe it will call a special convention of its own and pull out of the AFL-CIO.

Thus, by springtime '68, with a fat contract in its pocket and no auto industry negotiations to divert it for almost three years, the big union will turn to national politics.

With commitments to no one, with a "Citizenship" political machine hammered into shape by his brother Roy Reuther, Walter can swing into his old flashy style.

But, the sophisticates are asking, for whom and for what will he flash?

PEOPLE ARE COLORFUL

We're in the pink, and feeling fine
When everything's OK. . . .
Regretting things we say.
Sometimes we're green with envy, at
The thought of others' gold..
And I have often noticed folks
Turn purple. . .when they're cold .
But one thing makes us gray with fear. . . .
And we all know it's true;
The blackest time for all of us. . .
Is when our hearts are blue.

PRIVATE INVITATION ---- "We should never lose sight of the fact, "Sen. George Murphy (R. Calif.) stated, "initially private enterprise built the great cities that dot our land. Nor should we lose sight of the fact that the government programs to rescue and rebuilt our cities for the most part have failed. Private citizens and private enterprise, which built the cities in the first place, should be called upon to repair the cities' ills today."

Samaritans Are Making Comeback

A new survey made in this Jordanian city about 20 miles north of Jerusalem shows that from an all-time low of around 160 the community now is up to 345, with every prospect of increasing.

They have been regarded by the Jews as a dissident Hebrew sect since Old Testament days. Christians have a particular interest in the Samaritans because they are the subject of Jesus' first parable.

High Priest Amram Isaac, a patriarchal figure in dark robes and flaming red turban, attributes the upturn to two factors: the ending of centuries of persecution, and new blood coming in through conversions of outsiders marrying into the community.

The high priests's office goes back to the days of Moses. But he shows with pride the newly built white limestone temple and comfortable houses in the Samaritan quarter of Nablus as evidence of his people's new status as respected citizens of the Jordanian kingdom.

The world's oldest surviving Judaic sect also boasts a modern school, half-supported by the Samaritans, half by the Jordan government.

Amram also will display the Samaritan's most precious relic: the Abisha scroll of the first five books of the Bible, said to be the oldest known copy of the Pentateuch. Although the existing manuscript, on sheepskin, is said to be at least 2,000 years old, the original is dated in the 13th year of the occupation of Canaan by the Israelites 32 centuries ago.

In this ancient revision of the Bible, the Ten Commandments in Exodus are combined with those in Deuteronomy. They contain an extra commandment naming Mt. Gerizim, the holy mountain of the Samaritans, as the holy place of the Lord, instead of Jerusalem.

As the Samaritan woman said to Jesus: "Our fathers worshipped in this mountain; and ye say, that in Jerusalem is the place where men ought to worship."

Because of their belief, the Samaritans not only pray toward that mountain, which overlooks Nablus, but also celebrate their Passover there, in a setting of pastoral simplicity much as it must have been in the days of Moses.

Started Tower

Building of the Tower of London was begun during the reign of William the Conqueror, in 1078. The historic building has served as prison and palace, royal zoo and treasury in the past 890 years.

As the patient from the county walked the city-hospital corridor with his wife, he attempted to interpret the various signs for her: "Pharmacy -- that's the drugstore. Pediatrics -- that's for babies and children. Oral Surgery -- that's where they talk you out of it.

A-State Festival Of Champions June 3

JONESBORO, Ark. -- Classy fields of jumpers have been lined up to participate in the long jump, triple jump and high jump events in the Festival of Champions invitational to be staged at Arkansas State University June 3.

Memphis State jumping ace Ted Davis rates as the favorite in one event and a strong contender in another. The Tiger jumper owns one of the South's top marks in the triple jump with a leap of 48 feet, one inch. He also boasts a 23-6 best in the long jump to rate fourth in the field in that event.

Other competitors who will be seeking to defeat Davis include a trio of Arkansas State thinclads who top the state in the triple jump. Paced by Dan Carroll, who has a best of 46-0 1/2, the Indian stars have a monopoly on the event in the state. The only non - A - State triple jumper entered besides Davis is Bob Stewart of Ouachita Baptist who has done 43-2 3/4.

Other ranking A-Staters in the event are Eddie Pruitt with a jump of 45-6 3/4 and Jerald Spencer with a 45-4 3/4.

Two Arkansas AM& N stalwarts are expected to battle it out for the long jump championship with Davis a strong contender. Robert Brown (24-4) and Jesse Sibert (24-0) are the state's top men in that event. Other contenders in the event are David Johnston of State College of Arkansas with a 23-7 jump, John Cunningham of Ouachita (23-5 1/2) and Mike Hunnicutt of Southern State (23-4).

A-State's Jerald Spencer, the state record holder in the high jump, will lead a field that includes Andy Whiddon of Harding (6-6), Sibert of AM&N (6-5) and Butch Brogdon of Arkansas State (6-4).

Tickets for the Festival, sponsored by the Jonesboro Exchange Club, may be ordered from Box DDDD, State College, Ark. 72467.

Practice Runs Today

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind. (AP) — Qualifiers for the 500-mile auto race May 30 were to take their final practice runs at the Indianapolis Motor Speedway today, with track workouts centering on carburetion tests and mechanical adjustments.

Pit crews were allocated three hours practice time after the track was cleared. Smooth and rapid refueling action in the pits is considered a key factor in the Memorial Day race.

The Yankee 300 stock car race at Indianapolis Raceway Park Saturday will provide a weekend interlude for a number of 500 qualifiers. Speedway drivers committed to the stock event over the 1.7-mile course included Mario Andretti, who paced 500 qualifying this year with a record 168.982 m.p.h., and two-time 500 winner A. J. Foyt.

Yankee 300 entrants were to practice this afternoon, with about 55 entries expected to attempt qualifications Saturday morning. The Yankee 300 will start at 2 p.m.

The 500 field will reassemble for the annual drivers' meeting Monday to confer on race rules. The bad start last year, in which 11 cars were eliminated from the race, will be reviewed.

Stranger in Own Home

The barber gave him a regular haircut Thursday, but then his neighbors didn't recognize him and thought a stranger was burglarizing the Minnick home.

Four squad cars answered the burglary call.

"Hey, I live here!" the boy said as he was being led from the house.

Neighbors, after a closer look, realized their mistake.

David was set free.

"In the social area. . . we must not lose sight of our heriage -- the freedom of the individual not only to contribute to progress but to enjoy the fruit of his work. In the economic area we need a more complete understanding of what free competitive enterprice means -- how it works and what it contributes. We need to appreciate that industry and the community -- all of us -- share a mutuality of interests. When a business grows and prospers, the community profits. I need hardly emphasize that a business will not prosper unless its earnings permit the reinvestment of funds to underwrite its growth and to keep its facilities modern. In the international area the fundamental fact today is that our world is one world. We in America are a part of that world."

ECONOMY -- "Our federal government," remarked Rep. William Steiger (R. Wis.) "must be run economically and imaginatively. In order to do this effectively, in order to have this kind of government, we must carefully examine the existing structure and make changes which will strengthen the system as well as upgrade it and provide additional economies. Only in this manner will we be able to begin to effectively help reduce the duplication and overlapping that exist and thus revitalize the programs of our great nation."

Suits Filed In District Courts

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Professional basketball's legal war flared into a million-dollar court showdown Thursday when two more National Basketball Association teams filed suits to try to block the jumping of stars to the new American Basketball Association.

The St. Louis Hawks filed companion suits in U.S. District Court here to enjoin their rookie star, Lou Hudson, from playing with the Minnesota Muskies of the ABA. The Hawks also seek $3 million damages.

The San Francisco Warriors filed suit in San Francisco seeking to prevent Clyde Lee from going to New Orleans of the ABA. The Warriors seek $1 million plus an unspecified amount of damages.

Previously, the Los Angeles Lakers of the NBA filed suit to attempt to stop Jim Barnes from going to Dallas of the ABA.

Hudson, runner-up to Detroit's Dave Bing in the NBA's Rookie-of-the-Year voting this past season, signed a three-year contract with Minnesota last week, reportedly for between $150,000 and $200,000.

Lee, former Vanderbilt All-America, reportedly has signed a two-year, $90,000 contract with New Orleans.

At issue is the reserve clause in NBA contracts, which the established league contends binds a player to a team for at least one year after he completes a contract.

The NBA's reserve clause is similar to that of baseball, but a crucial difference is that baseball enjoys immunity from the antitrust laws under Supreme Court sanction. Basketball has no such solid legal support, and it is under the antitrust laws that ABA attorneys will challenge the NBA contracts.

The NBA reserve clause specifies that when a player's contract is expiring, he is offered a new contract by Sept. 1 of that year. If he does not sign by Oct. 1, the old contract is considered in effect for the coming year, with the player subject to a 25 per cent pay cut.

ASIAN HIGHWAYS PLAN

The idea of linking Asian countries with a network of highways was proposed to a UNESCO sub-committee in 1958. Countries have given high priority to the construction of main and linking roads. The main roads will span more than 14,000 miles.

Priority route A-1 will be 6,000 miles long, running from the Turkish frontier to Saigon, passing through Iran, Afghanistan, West Pakistan, India, East Pakistan, Burma, Thailand and Cambodia.

Priority route A-2, a more southerly road, will run 7,000 miles from the Iraqui border to Indonesia, passing through Iran. West Pakistan, India, Nepal, East Pakistan, Burma, Thailand and Malaysia. A ferry boat will link Singapore with Djakarta in Indonesia.

Four years is not long for the competion of this international road network which will link capitals, trading posts, cultural and historic sites.

My son and a fellow troop member were extolling the merits of the boy Scouts and were trying hard to sell two nonmembers on joining. After listening a few moments, one of the boys asked what Scouts did at their meetings. My son replied that they learned scouting - - drilled, worked for merit badges, put on demonstrations. At this point, one of the prospects interrupted to ask, "What do you demonstrate against?" James E. Griffith

Hughes Controls Atlanta

By MIKE RECHT
Associated Press Sports Writer

Dick Hughes, a "wild man in the minor leagues," has opposing hitters in the major leagues under control now after taming down himself.

The St. Louis Cardinal right-hander put down the slugging Atlanta Braves 5-0 Thursday night with a two-hitter, made even brighter because he didn't walk a man.

"That's the first regular season game I ever went nine innings without walking anyone," said the bespectacled 29-year-old rookie. "I did go nine innings once in spring training without a walk, but I was a wild man in the minor leagues."

In the only other National League game, the Chicago Cubs used their bats to bring league-leading Cincinnati under control 5-4 on Ron Santo's tie-breaking single in the ninth inning.

In the American League, Washington beat Cleveland 2-1; Kansas City edged Minnesota 3-2 and Detroit pounded Boston 9-3.

Hughes, making only his fifth start in the majors after struggling nine years in the minors, brought his record to a modest 2-1, the same mark he had with the Cardinals last season when they brought him up at the end of the year.

"He never made it before because he was wild," Cardinal Manager Red Schoendienst said. Hughes was walking more than four men a game in many of his minor league labors, although striking out twice that number.

But with the Cardinals in 1966, he walked only seven men in 21 innings, struck out 20, pitched a 2-0 shutout in his first start and finished with a 1.71 earned run average.

He has pitched 35 innings in 12 games— 10 in relief— this season and walked only 14 while fanning 36 with a 2.83 era.

Santo unloaded off reliever Ted Abernathy with one out after the Cubs loaded the bases against Gerry Arrigo on two walks and an error by Leo Cardenas.

Before that, Randy Hundley of Chicago and Tony Perez of Cincinnati traded two-run homers; Don Kessinger and Adolfo Phillips doubled home runs for the Cubs, and Jim Maloney hit a sacrifice fly and Tommy Helms a run-scoring single for the Reds.

Cal Koonce picked up his first victory with four shutout innings in relief as the surprising Cubs jumped ahead of Atlanta into fourth place.

UCLA Star's Arraignment Today In LA

Allen, a 19-year-old sophomore guard for UCLA's unbeaten national champions, has been free on $1,100 bail since his arrest Tuesday.

Police narcotics officers said they found three marijuana cigarettes in an automobile parked in front of Allen's home. They also found about four grams of marijuana in a pocket of a coat in the car, police said.

Officers said they investigated the vehicle because it had no license plates and found a registration slip with Allen's name in the jacket.

Allen said later: "I have never used marijuana. I was out with a friend Monday night, and I think he possibly may have left the marijuana in my car."

Allen did not give the police any information about his friend, narcotics officers said.

On their way to work each morning, several day - maids take the same bus I do. With unvarying regularity they get off at each stop in ones, twos and threes. But at one corner there's a difference.

Before the bus can stop, a small terrier hurls himself out of the nearest house. He pays no attention to two of the maids, but for the third he has a rapturous greeting. From head to tail his nervous little body vibrates with happiness as they disappear into the house.

One day the maid wasn't on the bus. The dog stood at the exit door, his eager welcome shrinking into anxiety. When the driver closed the door, the dog hurried to the front entrance. It too, shut in his face, and gloom filled the bus.

The driver couldn't stand it. He opened the door, looked down at the dog and explained loudly and kindly, "She ain't here today." Then he drove on, satisfied that he'd done the right thing.

FOLLIES OF '66

We've all been reading roundups of the most important news stories of 1966 - accounts of the major events that seemed to make the globe spin a little faster during the past twelve months.

We thought it might be worth while to record what we consider the most insignificant news events of 1966. These, in our opinion, did not make the terrestrial sphere move any faster; they just made a lot of spectators dizzy with the amount of good, clean newsprint wasted on them:

1. The present status of God and religion as propounded by a member of that learned body The Beatles, whose name escapes us.

2. Various ultimatums presented the people of these United States by one Stokley Carmichael.

3. The earth-shaking controversy over that royally commissioned book by a chap named Manchester.

4. Senator Bobby's humanitarianism toward the Viet Cong, which he thought worthy of his blood.

6. The Columbia Broadcasting System's venture into baseball with what used to be the world champion Yankees.

7. Senator Javits' pitch to become Vice-President (of the United States)

8. Assorted public statements by the Rev. Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr.

9. The heavyweight champion talker, Cassius Clay.

10. The strutting would - be Napoleons - Nkrumah, Sukarno, Mao, Castro, et al.,

The list could be ex-tended. Now with 1967 here, you can start building your own list. Probably the same cast of characters will star in the Follies of 1967.

CONFUSION OF TONGUES

When my college - bred daughter answered the phone, an unfamiliar male voice said, "Come on over, we're waiting for you."

Much annoyed, she inquired, "To whom do you wish to speak?"

There was a long pause, and then the man replied, "I'm sorry! I must have the wrong number. Nobody I know says 'whom'."

Militarists Give Israel Fighting Edge Over Arabs

WASHINGTON (AP) — U.S. military experts believe Israel's armed forces, although outnumbered, could defeat the combined Arab armies if the big powers stay out.

These experts give the Israelis an edge over the Arabs because of what was described as superior training and better equipment maintenance.

Israel's 300,000 soldiers and airmen stack up against some 400,000 armed men in the Arab states surrounding her, latest estimates indicate.

However, while Israel was said to be able to mobilize and deploy her 300,000 men in a matter of days, the Arab armies are believed able to muster much less than their full strength.

Military specialists expect any open war would pit Israel against four Arab countries primarily— Egypt, Jordan, Syria and Lebanon, all of which immediately border on Israel.

Although Iraq and Saudi Arabia have pledged support, the American experts discount their probable effectiveness on the ground.

This is because Iraq has serious problems with rebellious Kurdish tribesmen and the Saudi-Arabians are embroiled in the Yemen civil war, where 40,000 Egyptian troops also are pinned down on the opposite side of the issue.

Some government sources, however, regard as an open question what Arab nations actually might be involved in a war with Israel.

Nearly all are sure Egypt would be joined by Syria in such a battle, but some think Saudi Arabia, Lebanon and Jordan— although forced by internal pressures to take a stance for Arab unity— are too closely aligned with the United States to actually put massive numbers of troops in the field against Israel.

U.S. military men believe Israel would have to array about 100,000 of her troops along the Sinai frontier where the main Egyptian thrust could be expected.

Meanwhile, it was said, Israel probably would have to keep a larger force along her northern and eastern frontiers facing Syria, Lebanon and Jordan.

Israel is only about 40 miles wide at some points in the north and a determined thrust by Jordan's army of 50,000 conceivably could cut the country in half.

American military experts rate the Jordanian army as about the best among the Arab nations.

Syria has about 60,000 men under arms. Of these, about 30,000 are believed deployed near Israel while the other 30,000 are held back deeper inside the country, apparently on guard against internal uprisings.

Lebanon has only 10,000 men and only about 1,500 of these are stationed adjacent to Israel. It is considered doubtful the Lebanese would make much of a contribution to the over-all Arab effort.

Egypt has 190,000 men, many of them already mobilized in the Sinai area.

The Israelis, it was understood, have about 150,000 of their 300,000 troops on active duty.

One big question bearing on the military effectiveness of the Arabs is how well their joint command might work. Such a structure has been in existence for several years.

But there are deep-seated rivalries among the Arab countries. Jordan broke diplomatic relations with Syria this week in a dispute over a mining incident along their common boundary.

Driver Training May Start in First Grade

LOS ANGELES (AP) — California soon may be putting first-graders behind the wheel.

Russ Walton, assistant state transportation administrator, predicts the 6-year-olds may be zooming around the playground in their own tiny cars in driving safety training.

"We must motivate drivers with lifelong safety habits in the first grade or perhaps even in kindergarten," Walton said Thursday in addressing 6,000 delegates at an annual safety conference.

ARMED FORCES

U. S. ARMY, VIETNAM (AHTNC) -- Army Private First Class Troy D. Carmack, 18, son of Mr. and Mrs. Roy L. Carmack, Route 1, Sikeston, Mo., participated in "Operation Manhattan" in Vietnam.

"Manhattan" was centered in the Boi Loi and Ho Bo Woods near Dau Tieng. This was the first time the woods had been probed by a large force, and it resulted in the destruction of all Viet Cong fortifications found. The area was thought to be an organization and control point for VC terrorist activities.

Pvt. Carmack, a cannoneer in Battery C, 2nd Battalion of the 4th Infantry Division's 77th Artillery and other members of the division accounted for 40 VC dead and recovered more than 250 tons of rice.

Carmack entered on active duty in June 1966 and was stationed at Ft. Sill, Okla. before his arrival in Vietnam last February.

He attended Sikeston High School.

ABERDEEN PROVING GROUND, MD. -- Army Private Thomas E. Vaughn, 19, son of Mr. and Mrs. Doyle E. Vaughn, Essex, Mo., completed a vehicle mechanic course at Aberdeen Proving Ground, Md., May 12.

During the course, he was trained to repair internal combustion engines and wheeled vehicle chassis components. Instruction was given in the fundamentals of electrical and transmission systems.

(JO216) DA NANG, VIETNAM (FHTNC) -- Marine Lance Corporal Ruben Leija, son of Mrs. Anastacia C. Leija of Sikeston, Mo., is near Da Nang, Vietnam, serving with the Second Battalion, First Regiment of the First Marine Division.

His battalion, when not on large scale search and destroy operations, mans defensive positions around the regimental command post.

In addition to providing security on a bridge leading into the regimental area, the battalion carries out patrols and ambushes throughout the regimental area of responsibility.

HOA KHANH, VIETNAM (FHTNC) -- Marine Lance Corporal Charles W. DeJournett, son of Mr. Riley W. DeJournett of Route 1, Essex, Mo., works as a boker with Supply Battalion, First Force Service Regiment, located 10 miles northwest of Dan Nang, Vietnam.

Under the authority of his battalion are Ration Company, Seventh Separate Bulk Fuel Company.

The main body of the battalion is located at Red Beach, where they receive, store and ship tons of supplies each day to various combat units in the northern -most part of South Vietnam.

Before entering the service in September 1965, DeJournett attended Dexter Senior High Senior High School in Dexter, Mo.

(JO412) USS ALFRED A. CUNNINGHAM (DD-752) -- Sonar Technician Seaman William L. Voss, USN, son of Mrs. Hobert Voss of 811 E. S. Main St., Dexter, Mo., has returned to Long Beach, Calif., aboard the destroyer USS Cunningham, after six and a half months in the Western Pacific.

During the 188 day deployment, he took part in Tonkin Gulf operations, plane guarding for attack aircraft carriers, search and rescue of downed pilots, surveillance of enemy vessels, and patrol duties in the Taiwan Straite.

Ports visited, by the ship, during the 40,000 mile cruise were Pearl Harbor, Yokosuka and Sasebo, Japan; Kaohsiung and Keelung, Taiwan; Subic Bay, Philippine Islands; Hong Kong; and Midway Island.

CAM RANH BAY, VIETNAM (AHTNC) -- Army Private First Class Robert L. Hamilton, 20, son of Mr. and Mrs. James Hamilton, 528 Lee Ave., Charleston, Mo., was assigned to the 879th Transportation Company near Cam Ranh Bay, Vietnam, May 7.

Pvt. Hamilton, a stevedore, entered the Army in March 1966 and was last stationed at Ft. Sill, Okla.

PLEIKU, VIETNAM (AHTNC) -- Army Private First Class Larry D. Garner, 20, son of Mrs. Ethel Garner, Jackson St., Sikeston, Mo., arrived at the Pleiku, Vietnam, base camp of the 4th Infantry Division, May 17.

Before being assigned to a specific unit, Pvt. Garner received 50 hours of training with the 4th Replacement Detachment.

Garner entered the Army in August 1966.

U. S. ARMY, VIETNAM (AHTNC) -- Army Private First Class Charles W. Taylor, 19, son of Mr. and Mrs. LaRay Taylor, Route 1, Oran, Mo., participated in "Operation Pershing" in the Central Highlands of Vietnam.

Taylor, a rifleman in Company B, 2nd Battalion of the 1st Air Cavalry Division's 12th Cavalry, and his unit were engaged in dragging the Viet Cong from their vast network of tunnels and bunkers. The VC had been driven underground by constant U. S. artillery and air strikes.

The operation has accounted for the capture of several VC and the confiscation of vast stores for food and arms from the enemy.

IF YOU WERE THE JUDGE

BY Jack Strass L.L.D.

THE CASE OF THE EXPOSED NEIGHBOR

At 60 years, Gus didn't give a hoot about anything except his peace and comfort on weekends with an emphasis on the word "comfort." He'd set up a beach chair in his kitchen (near the ice-box where the cold beer was) and lounge around in his B.V.D.s watching a baseball game on his portable TV set. While this might have been fine for Gus, it so upset his neighbor Prudence that she had him arrested on charges of indecent exposure.

"It seemed that every time I turned my head," she complained to a judge, "I'd see Gus's bay window as he walked past his bay window."

"If it unnerved her so much," was Gus's answer, "she shouldn't have looked. While she may be a good woman, she's a good woman in the worst sense of the word."

IF YOU WERE THE JUDGE, would you convict and fine Gus for indecent exposure?

This is how the judge ruled: No! The judge held that a conviction for indecent exposure requires that the exposure be intentional and not accidental; that exposure as a result of carelessness, particularly in the privacy of a home, is not in and of itself a crime.

(Based upon a 1963 Municipal Court of Appeals, D.C., decision)

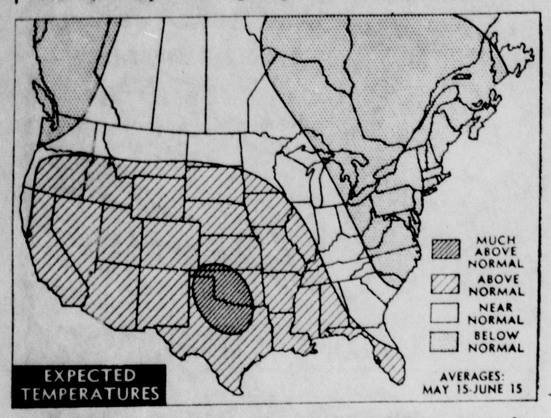
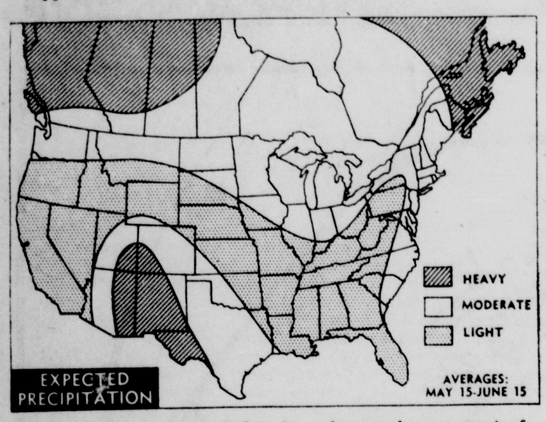
Maps show Weather Bureau's estimated forecasts of average temperature, precipitation through June 15.



Temperatures are expected to average below seasonal normal over the middle Atlantic states and the northeast. Near normal over the northern and central Pacific coast, northern border states, and in a band from the upper Great Lakes to the south Atlantic coastal states.



Precipitation is expected to be subnormal over most of the south, the northern and central plains, the great basin, and most of the west coast states. Above normal totals are indicated for the southern plateau. Elsewhere near normal precipitation is in prospect.

ANN LANDERS
Answers Your Questions

Dear Ann Landers: I don't sleep in my wife's nightgowns, nor do I wear her girdle, but if I did I can't see that it would be any of your business -- or anyone else's for that matter. Recently I had an experience along these lines and it burned me up.

I have been having trouble with my ankles lately, a general weakness of the muscles. My podiatrist suggested that I walk around the house in my wife's high heels for an hour or two during the evening. The other night the kid who delivers papers came to collect. I answered the door in my wife's high heels. The boy almost died laughing, and now it is all over the neighborhood.

Why are people so eager to put two and two together and get six? I hope you will print my letter and open a few eyes. --- NORMAL NORMAN

Dear Norman: Apparently the eyes are already open. It's the mouths you are having trouble with.

In all fairness, you can hardly blame the kid. One does not expect to see the man of the house klomping around in his wife's shoes. You asked for it.

Dear Ann Landers: What do you think of parents of a working son or daughter who demand a share of that person's salary even though they don't need it?

I am 19, have a good job and want to save some money so I can be married. But how can I save anything when these vultures demand one - fourth of my paycheck every week?

I have been working for seven months but I never had to pay any board or room. Suddenly my folks decided I should contribute to the house. They told me I have no choice --- either contribute or leave. Can they evict me? What are my legal rights? --- SON OF MONEY GRABBERS

Dear Son: Legal rights vary according to the state, but in my opinion, this is not a matter of law, it is a matter of personal integrity.

A boy 19, who is earning money and living at home, should pay something for room and board (and laundry, I'll bet, plus telephone and maid-service. . .etc.) whether his folks need it or not. He should pay because he does not want to be a parasite. Your attitude leaves a lot to be desired, fella.

Dear Ann Landers: Please settle an argument: My fiance and I plan to be married soon. Her family is from another country. None of them will be able to attend the wedding. My parents are giving us the wedding reception as a gift.

The problem is that my parents want us to set all the gifts aside and open them in their presence --- just the four of us. My fiance and I feel that these are OUR gifts and we should not be asked to share the opening with anyone, what do you say? --- FEELINGS AT STAKE.

Dear Feelings: Why be so selfish? Pass the joy around. If they want to be present, let them. It costs you nothing.

Confidential to Worried and Nervous: The answer is no. It is not possible. A 16-year-old girl who would have to ask this question is in desperate need of information. Go to the public library and get "Ann Landers Talks To Teen-Agers About Sex" or buy a paperback.

What is love? How does it differ from sexual attraction? Read "Love Or Sex And How To Tell The Difference," by Ann Landers. Send 35¢ in coin and a long, stamped, self - addressed envelope with your request.

HOME AIR CONDITIONING NOW A "NECESSITY," SURVEY SHOWS

Just a few years ago, central air conditioning in the home was considered a luxury, to be enjoyed by a lucky few. Now it's considered a necessity by nearly 70 percent of the American population, the Plumbing - Heating - Cooling Information Bureau reports. It's predicted that over 1 million systems will be installed during 1967.

There are several reasons for this, the Bureau notes. They include:

1. Americans are more affluent and can afford air conditioning. Furthermore, it's classified by FHA as a home improvement and thus qualifies for home improvement loans.

2. Americans are exposed to air conditioning everywhere they go --at work, in stores, theaters, restaurants. It's natural to want it at home too.

3. Air conditioning is recommended by many physicians for its health benefits. It eases the strain on heart patients who otherwise might suffer from excessive heat and humidity. It also gives relief to allergy sufferers. Tests have shown that it can reduce the pollen count in a room by as much as 98 percent.

4. The price of home cooling has gone down considerably at the same time that equipment has become more efficient.

If you're thinking of having home cooling installed, be sure to deal with a qualified heating-cooling contractor. There's more involved than just installing equipment. It must be "sized" to your home, and this involves such things as the square feet of the house, its style and prevailing exposure, the number of windows and the directions they face, whether it's insulated, the typography of the area and the size of your family, to name a few.

IT'S UP TO YOU

THE CRUEL ILLUSION

Running like a scarlet thread through the comment of many sincere people who would like to improve the hard lot of the poor, is the basic assumption, often eloquently expressed in words, that this can be done by gaining and using political power. This is the assumption behind the "black power" movement in our country. It is the rallying cry that has forced the writing of much harmful legislation on our statute books.

Does any competent observer who has some knowledge of history believe that economic and social gains can be achieved by the exercise of political powers? People who were obsessed with this type of thinking gained control of Saskatchewan, Canada, from 1944 to 1964, with the result that stagnation and hard times plagued that province far more severely than in the neighboring provinces of British Columbia, Alberta Manitoba. Industrial activity declined, new businesses were not organized, many were discontinued, and there was a general exit of industrial and professional leadership. No doubt many Cubans thought that by gaining political power under the leadership of Fidel Castro, they could solve the economic problems of their country. They have been much hungrier and more deprived ever since they realized their dream.

The hard facts are that economic and social gains cannot be achieved by the coercive exercise of the power of government. That's why the people in all communist lands are short of food, housing, clothing and many of the amenities that most of the poorest people in our country enjoy. The fact of the matter is that far more will be achieved toward relieving poverty and raising the standard of living for our poor people by seeking to help them become more productive.

If we wish to be free, we must stick to the system of rewarding men in proportion to their contribution to the wealth of our country. If one is not earning enough to live comfortably, he should strive to improve his skills and increase his output. That is the sure way to bring him the goods and services he needs and wants. That may appear to be a slow, hard way, but experience shows that it will work. Likewise, experience shows that the political power method which might seem to be faster, is a cruel illusion. Instead of improving the lot of our needy people, it will further impoverish them.

We need an all-out good will effort to help our lower paid workers increase their knowledge and their skills. That may not be spectacular, and it does not greatly arouse emotions, but it will produce the desired results/

Before you sink $6400 into this year's status symbol, slip behind the wheel of the Mercedes-Benz 250S.

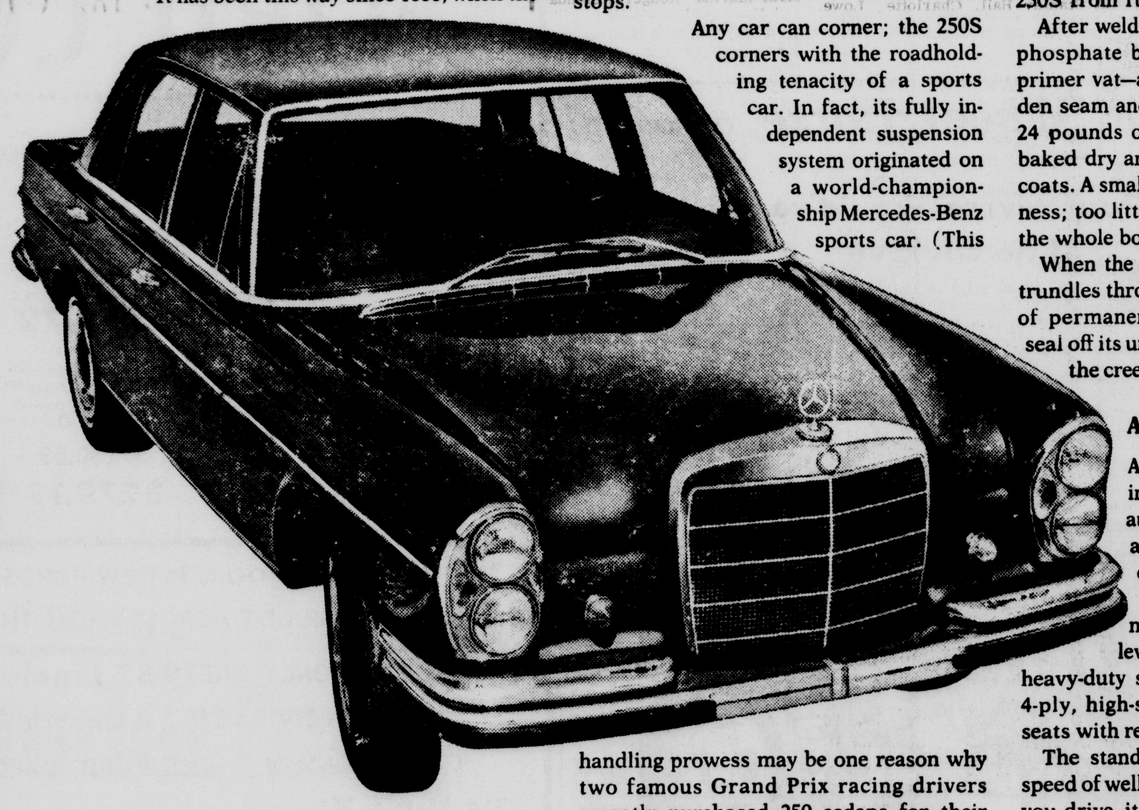
While other $6400 cars preen in their over-styled finery, the Mercedes-Benz 250S performs. It shuns pretense and stresses efficiency—with legitimate advances, like 4-wheel disc brakes and fully independent suspension, that its rivals may not have for years. You can hammer the 250S over cowpaths. You can park it without tears. And it will still be humming along when this year's crop of dreamboats is forgotten.

Read the whole refreshing story.

What makes the Mercedes-Benz 250S so different from its rivals?

The reason is simple. Stylists and cost accountants and marketing geniuses don't dictate the design of Mercedes-Benz cars; engineers do.

It has been this way since 1886, when the company's two founders (both engineers, of course) invented the world's first successful gasoline-powered automobile.



Any car can corner; the 250S corners with the roadholding tenacity of a sports car. In fact, its fully independent suspension system originated on a world-championship Mercedes-Benz sports car. (This handling prowess may be one reason why two famous Grand Prix racing drivers recently purchased 250 sedans for their personal use.)

Any car rides smoothly—on smooth roads. The 250S rides smoothly over potholes, ruts and gravel trails. Credit that sophisticated suspension. And ingenious details like the way front and rear suspension assemblies are rubber-cushioned where they join the chassis.

This suspension "offers a combination of riding comfort and stability that is the standard for comparison," says Road & Track magazine.

LATE BULLETIN

Mercedes-Benz 250-300 Series Noses Out Rolls-Royce, Buick, Etc., In Reader Poll

NEW YORK—In a unique "Readers' Choice" poll, the 375,000 monthly readers of Car & Driver magazine were asked to select the world's best cars, in 11 categories, and mail in their votes. These knowledgeable automotive enthusiasts responded by the thousands. The results, published in the May 1967 issue of the magazine, award the Mercedes-Benz 250-300 series the title of "Best Luxury and Personal Car." Those who know cars best consider Mercedes-Benz best. A gratifying thought.

The moments of truth

On the open road, the 250S excels precisely where other $6400 cars falter: in those gruelling maneuvers that test the outer margins of performance.

Any car can stop; the 250S can stop, stop, stop—and keep stopping. Unbolt a wheel and you'll see why: caliper-type disc brakes, fitted at each wheel. They're standard equipment. So is the subtle power assist that turns panic stops into smooth, gentle stops.

Rattles and tremors banned

Most newcomers to the 250S are surprised to find how solid it feels. No odd squeaks, no tiny vibrations. It's as if the whole body were a single, rigid steel structure.

It is. Rather than bolting a body and frame together, Mercedes-Benz combines them in a "unit" body welded at 10,000 points. Sheet steel more than a millimeter thick, and corrugated for extra rigidity, forms the floor section.

Very vital statistics

Few other cars at any price can match the pains Mercedes-Benz takes to protect the 250S from rust and corrosion.

After welding, the body gets a cleansing phosphate bath. Then it plunges into a primer vat—and sits there until every hidden seam and crevice is coated. Emerging 24 pounds of primer heavier, it is then baked dry and covered with three enamel coats. A small device measures paint thickness; too little or too much, and back goes the whole body for a repaint.

When the paint has hardened, the 250S trundles through a booth where 24 pounds of permanent, plasticized undercoating seal off its underside and wheel wells from the creeping menace of corrosion.

About that price

Among the features included in that $6400 price are: 4-speed automatic transmission; power-assisted steering; electrically operated windows; a hydraulic unit at the rear axle that automatically keeps the car riding level, regardless of trunk loads; heavy-duty springs and shock absorbers; 4-ply, high-speed tires; individual front seats with reclining backrests.

The standard engine develops a top speed of well over 100 mph. At the speeds you drive, it is docile and almost silent. And it yields up to 20 miles per gallon in normal use.

For $638 extra, you can order the 250SE engine. Instead of carburetors it uses a fuel-injection system for an approximately 10% gain in overall performance, with no loss in fuel economy.

Because the 250S measures two feet less in overall length than its major $6400 rivals, you might worry that interior space is limited. Far from it; in fact, the 250S matches and in some instances exceeds its competitors in passenger space. Their extra size comes from front and rear overhang and other styling tricks.

Mercedes-Benz motor cars: from $25,582* to $4,084*

You may be able to afford a Mercedes-Benz without knowing it. Below are suggested retail prices* for 7 of the 15 Mercedes-Benz models:

A word on safety

Mercedes-Benz has received widespread publicity about its safety engineering achievements over the past several years.

Work continues to make Mercedes-Benz cars even safer, both in avoiding trouble, and in protecting you if trouble occurs.

For sane drivers, Mercedes-Benz cars can help reduce the hazards of driving—without dulling its pleasures.

But however well engineered it may be, no car can entirely defend against the showoff, the drunkard, or the neurotic bent on self-destruction. Safety depends on you, too.

Interstate Bridge Is Discussed

CAIRO, ILL. -- The proposed $17 million interstate highway bridge at Cairo is still under discussion by Illinois highway officials.

After Illinois officials conclude discussions with federal authorities and agreements are reached, the Illinois division of highways is expected to enter a construction permit approval.

The four-lane bridge will be part of I-57, which extends from Chicago to Sikeston, Mo., where it will connect with I-55 and other interstate routes in the federal system.

The highway will be the longest interstate in Illinois and is nearly completed from Mt. Vernon to a point about 15 miles north of Cairo. Some of the work for the Cairo area may be let to contract this year.

Preliminary planning for the giant bridge, which will have two 12-foot traffic lanes in each direction divided by a median, is under way. Estimated cost of the project also includes approaches to the bridge on both sides of the Mississippi River.

Location of the proposed bridge will be about 7.5 miles north of the junction of the Mississippi and Ohio Rivers.

Highway officials hope the bridge can be completed by 1970. More studies are expected to be needed when federal authorities give their approval.

Dexter Seeks New Industry

DEXTER -- An effort to gain more industry for Dexter --with the heavy emphasis placed on industry to employ men -- is starting this week after the appointment of the industrial committee of the Chamber of Commerce by President Percy Clippard.

Bud Davis was elected chairman of the committee at its organizational meeting early this week in the Chamber of Commerce offices. Clippard had previously named Davis, Gordon Hart, Lehman Godwin, Bill Pierce, Frank Hamra, Harold Williams and Claude Arnold as members of the committee, and Davis was elected as chairman from among that group.

We want to make an all-out effort to gain more industry, because more industry is the key to Dexter's further growth and development," Davis said.

He stressed that emphasis would also be placed on "taking care of" the several existing industries here and said that "we must also do all in our power to see that they are happy with Dexter and have all the facilities they need.

Davis said that the committee planned to take its "industry story" to various service and civic clubs here, and urge these clubs and organizations, as well as individuals, to join in "this all-out community effort".

"This has been done elsewhere with great success, and there is no reason why it cannot be done here," he said. "But," he added, enthusiasm to do it."

The committee plans to make contacts throughout the nation, and make further contact with state officials in Jefferson City concerned with industrial development.

Lippmann Gives Up News Column

NEW YORK (AP) — Walter Lippmann— 77 years old and a columnist for 36 years— has announced he is stopping his regular newspaper pieces.

In a brief final installment of his twice-a-week column, he wrote Thursday: "More and more, I have come to wish to get rid of the necessity of knowing, day in and day out, what the blood pressure is at the White House and who said what and who saw whom and who is listened to and who is not listened to."

The Los Angeles Times syndicate had distributed Lippmann's column since the New York World Journal Tribune went out of business recently. The New York Herald Tribune had been the home of his column from 1931 until the paper died last year.

Lippmann said he plans to write articles for newspapers occasionally.

The POWER of FAITH

By WOODI ISHMAEL

Once blind, Arthur Wakolee of the Cattaragus Indian tribe in New York state found light through faith and understanding and finally actually regained his eyesight. He was in the fourth grade when his sight failed. Raised by his grandfather and grandmother he learned from them about brotherly love and The Golden Rule, even though they were not Christians.

His grandmother firmly believed that he would see again and fasted and prayed three days at a time for this to happen. In time, Wakolee, now 73 years old, did regain his sight and he heeded grandfather's words: "I want you to go to the white man's church where the sun comes up .... they are our brothers and sisters."

Later Wakolee met with Mormon missionaries and learned there was considerable similarity between their teachings and those of his grandparents. He accepted the gospel, was baptized and spent the rest of his life teaching love. He held the presidency of the Mormon Church at Cattaragus.

To Our Graduates

Each Spring when Nature bedecks her flowers in their gayest and loveliest raiment, she gives us still another wondrous crop.. youth that is blossoming into young-man-and womanhood. These are our graduates, those sturdy and irrepressible boys and girls to whom all the great world is just unfolding.

With diplomas in their hands and high hopes in their hearts, they step up or out of their educational environment and become a little more mature toward the old, yet ever young in the process of living.

Greet life with your head high and a song in your soul, dear Graduates. You have done well in your classrooms. You will do well on whatever roadway of life you choose to travel. This is our prayer.

You are the hope of America! God Bless every one of You!

Character is something each one of us must build for himself, out of the laws of God and nature, the examples of others, and -- most of all -- out of the trials and errors of daily life. Character is the total of thousands of small daily strivings to live up to the best that is in us. Character is the final decision to reject whatever is demeaning to oneself or to others and with confidence and honestly to choose the right.

This is graduation week at Juda and strangely, at first, you see no evidence of grief.

The scars of sorrow run deep among the 300 persons who inhabit this hilltop hamlet. They show themselves in small and subtle ways.

A mother stands in the dust near a barn and uses words like "is" and "does" as she talks of a daughter now dead nearly two months.

Even pets mourn. Joyce Kaderly's cat, the one with 23 toes, still prowls restlessly through the house at night.

Seventeen of the seniors sit in a classroom and talk to a stranger about themselves. Dan Leaver, the class valedictorian, says, "We were a close-knit group and this has made us closer. We are all friends and we try not to let it show where it hurts."

The seniors will graduate tonight.

The ceremony will be in the school gymnasium, where memorial services were held for the nine girls on a rainy Sunday in April.

There will be diplomas for the parents of each victim.

"It's not easy," says Mrs. Harry Smith, mother of one of the girls. "It's pretty tough, I tell you. We all go to these things and we cry."

"It's like a funeral," said senior Ron Gruenberg. "You may not think about it all the time and maybe you will tell a joke afterwards and laugh a bit, but it's still in your mind."

For days after the March 30 accident, whenever the school band marched outside to practice in the spring warmth, Mrs. Smith would be gone from the yellow brick house on Main Street. Her daughter Nelva, 17, had been a baton twirler with the band.

Seven girls were in the band. All nine were on the school newspaper staff, and from its pages, fragments of vignettes whisper of the past.

"Nelva, what's keeping you from writing that letter to Mike A.? Does college keep him too busy?"

There was once a summer day and Nelva was Juda's dairy queen, helping serve cheese at the Green County Fair. Mike was a boy from Shullsburg, who walked up to the booth. He went off that fall to begin his college studies at Platteville, but he and Nelva wrote every week.

Joyce Kaderly, 17, and her boy friend had a secret, a wedding date in July. He was a dairy farmer, out of school for two years.

"I was going through some of her things this morning and I found the jewelry store ad she had clipped, for diamond rings," said her mother, Mrs. Edward Kaderly, twisting a ring on her finger. It was Joyce's class ring.

Nancy Siegentahler was a homecoming princess. It was October and a bonfire blazed. She rode in a white convertible. Dan Leaver passed for one touchdown, ran for another. Juda beat New Glarus 20-14. The seniors danced until midnight.

"I'm so lucky," Nancy wrote once in an English essay.

Of the nine girls, only Nancy answered, "No," when the school newspaper asked seniors if they were anxious to graduate.

Janice Siedschlag, 17, was anxious. She had so many plans. She had worked as a nurse's aide the past summer. She thought she might become a nurse or a teacher, or perhaps an airline stewardess.

"She was almost too good," her father said on the day she died. "She pulled more than her fair share of the work. Only one child like that comes along in a family. I almost wanted to hold her back."

Janice wrote in a psychology essay: "No, I can't say I'm a definite overreacher or underachiever. No, I'm not in a rut. I have so many things to do that I don't have time to get in a rut."

Janice, like her cousin, Nelva, was thinking of attending vocational school in Madison. Nelva wanted to be a bookkeeper. Nancy Siegentahler planned to enter the same school, to become a secretary. College would last four years, vocational school only two. It wouldn't interfere if the right boy came along.

Dark-haired, attractive Linda Moe, 18, wanted to be a secretary at the statehouse in Madison. Notice that she had passed the Civil Service test arrived at the two-story frame home on Maine Street the day of her death.

At the Kaderly home east of Juda, a yellow and white tom cat named "Panther," after the school's nickname, sat in the doorway and mewed for two nights after Joyce Kaderly died.

Joyce was proud of "Panther." He has 23 toes, six on each front paw and on one back foot. Joyce loved animals. She had broken three horses for riding, and even as a child she could call the cows by name.

Ed Kaderly, a farmer who has run twice for state senator, is building a new house atop a hill up the road. It looks for miles over the green fertility of southern Wisconsin. Joyce was eager to have a graduation party and housewarming at the same time.

Now few seniors are anxious for graduation night. It will be a night of stiffness and tension, of frustration and regret.

"It seems whenever we take a big step in our life, like graduation, we should all be happy," said Betty Zweifel. "This ruins it."

"It's going to be sad," said Janice Matzke, one of the truly fortunate survivors. She had been registered in the room where the burning fuel hit with greatest impact.

"I stayed at a motel on a trip last Saturday for the first time since then" said Kalk. "I couldn't sleep. I got up and checked the doors, the windows, the fire escape. There was no reason for it. But I couldn't sleep until about 6 a.m."

Mrs. McIntosh Dies Thursday

CHAFFEE -- Mrs. Nellie May McIntosh, 75, of Blodgett, a former Chaffee resident, died at 7 p.m. Thursday in the Missouri Delta Community hospital in Sikeston where she had been a patient four days.

Mrs. McIntosh was born May 7, 1892, in Sikeston, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Masterson.

She married James Arthur McIntosh of Mitchellville, Ill., Oct. 18, 1906. He died April 15, 1957.

Survivors are, two daughters, Mrs. Fletcher Withrow, route two, Sikeston, and Mrs. Clyde Watts of St. Louis; two sons, James McIntosh of Cape Girardeau and Edward McIntosh of Houston, Tex.; two brothers, Roy A. Masterson of Sikeston and Harry K. Masterson of Los Angeles; two sisters, Mrs. Archie Laster and Mrs. John Martin, both of Los Angeles; 12 grandchildren and 14 great-grandchildren.

Mrs. McIntosh was a member of the First Baptist church where services will be conducted at 2:30 p.m. Sunday. The Rev. R.L. Robinson, assisted by the Rev. Jimmie Edmondson, pastor of the Blodgett Baptist church, will officiate.

Burial will be in the Union Park cemetery with the Bisplinghoff Funeral Home in charge.

The pleasantly packaged young NASA secretary was leaving the Cape Kennedy cafeteria after lunch, happily soaking up the appreciative stares of some 80 men still seated at the tables. When she got to the door, one of the men shouted, "There she goes!" and the entire crowd rushed toward her. She fled in panic, one jump ahead of the pack -- just in time to hear the earsplitting launching of a Titan missile."

HELP WITH FRUSTRATION

NEW DELHI (AP) -- An "Anti-frustration Squad" has been formed by a group of private citizens here to help people solve their personal problems.

The squad's director, D.D. Diwan, says free advice is provided by experts on social, educational, legal, matrimonial and domestic matters. One day recently it offered advice even on the size refrigerator a man should buy.

The guidance should help dispel anyone's frustrations, he added.

The Prayer
From The Upper Room

We are ambassadors for Christ, God making his appeal through us. (II Corinthians 5:20, RSV)

PRAYER: Lord, I thank Thee for Thy promise of eternal life. Increase my willingness and courage to serve and to witness for Thee at home, in my work, or wherever I may be. I ask this in the name of Jesus who taught me to pray, "Our Father who art in heaven. . . .Amen."

Today In U. S. History

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Today is Friday, May 26, the 146th day of 1967. There are 219 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On this date:

In 1790, Tennessee was organized as a territory.

In 1805, Napoleon Bonaparte was crowned king of Italy.

In 1864, an act of Congress creating Montana territory was approved.

In 1942, a 20-year-treaty of alliance was signed by Britain and the Soviet Union.

In 1942, the Nazis began their drives for Stalingrad and the Caucasus.

In 1946, normal service was restored on U.S. railroads after a strike, and government control ended.

Ten years ago — Disorders subsided in Haiti as Daniel Fignole was sworn in as provisional president.

Five years ago—A United Nations committee said it found no threat to peace as a result of South Africa's racial policies.

One year ago—The U.S. cultural center and library in Hue, South Vietnam, was sacked and burned by young rioters.

Recent developments in constitutional law have brought the rights of the individual in a criminal case a long way. But the rights of the individual in the market place have not yet been fully established.

Chaffee Woman Dies at Cape

CHAFFEE -- Mrs. Frances M. Montgomery, 77, died Thursday at a Cape Girardeau hospital. She was born March 24, 1890, at Oxford, Ark., the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Pinkston.

On Feb. 10, 1907, she married U. P. Montgomery at Oxford. They moved to Southeast Missouri in 1938 and to Chaffee in 1955.

Mrs. Montgomery was a member of the General Baptist church in Chaffee.

She is survived by two daughters, Mrs. Kermit Proffer, Cape Girardeau, and Mrs. Calvin Cuttler, Chaffee; five sons, Troy E., J. P., and Everett Hall Montgomery, Chaffee, Forrest Montgomery, Grubbs, Ark., and Homer Montgomery, Bloomfield.

Also surviving are a brother, Everett Pinkston, Tuckerman, Ark.; two sisters, Mrs. A. C. Gist, Poplar Bluff, and Mrs. Homer Minze, Bloomfield; 19 grandchildren and 9 great-grandchildren.

Grandchildren Are Pallbearers

PORTAGEVILLE - Six grandchildren served as pallbearers at services Wednesday for Mrs. Annie Eva Edwards Adams, 87, who died Monday in Sikeston.

Mrs. Adams was born March 12, 1880, in Pemiscot county. She lived in the Portageville area most of her life. She married Albert Leroy Adams on Aug. 30, 1899. He died Dec. 2, 1955.

The pallbearers were Charles L. Downing, Van Adams, Ronnie Adams, Terrell Crafton, Connie Adams and Emerson Adams.

Burial was in Portageville.

Sikeston. At first, the glamor was gone, or rather, the seniors had their wings clipped. For who wanted to stay in Sikeston on graduation night!

The challenge for the committee was set -- to make the 1967 party more enticing than ever. And, looking at the reservation list, it has. There are 267 in the senior class and more than 300 reservations. Dates outside the class were welcome, for a fee.

There was an obvious advantage to not having the party in Paducah, no two-hour bus ride. That meant more time for partying -- perhaps time to take in a movie.

The party begins at 10 p.m. tonight at the Imperial Bowling lanes in Sikeston. By sunup the graduate will have spent four hours dancing to the music of the Memphis Gilloteens in a tropical setting or bowling or playing the free pinball machines. He will have eaten his fill at a catered sit-down Hawaiian feast and for once had all the Cokes he wanted. Every half hour, he had a chance at a door prize.

At 2:30 a.m. he will take a chartered bus to the Malone theater for the Sikeston premiere of a first run movie and then go back to the bowling alley for a morning-after orange juice and doughnut.

And it won't cost him a penny. He earned the money during the school year, $2800, as most Sikeston residents know, by selling candy, greeting cards or even his own services at a slave day.

But he's not a slave at the party. He, the graduate is king, for committes of parents have been working for and with the students for months.

The party begins every year with a meeting for the seniors and their parents, called by the senior class president, this year, Skip Alsup. The parents elect a chairman, this year, Ralph Boyer, and the committee structure is formed.

The successful finance committee was headed by Bill Werneck, with central headquarters at the Castor Alsup home. The suckling pig, the Hawaiian luau and the morning - after coffee and doughnuts were arranged by a committee headed by Mr. and Mrs. John Carr, who were also responsible for transportation.

Palm trees were built, wallpaper fish painted and hung and yardage in fishnet were figured by the women on Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Ziegenhorn's committee.

Chaperones were arranged by Mr. and Mrs. John Hux's committee, entertainment by the Leo Bowman's committee and the location was planned by the Charles Stamp committee.

Each year committee names are different. But the fact that there are committees each year is a tribute to Sikeston residents. For they saw a need and working together, turned a problem into a community asset.

Two Injured in Highway Crashes

Two highway collisions resulted in minor injuries Thursday in highway collisions.

A 1958 Chevrolet truck, driven by James Taylor, 32, Malden, attempted a left turn on route D, six miles south of Dexter, at 9:30 a.m. when it was struck by a 1966 Oldsmobile, driven by Peggy Hampton, 37, Dexter.

Mrs. Hampton was treated for shock by a Bloomfield physician.

Five miles north of Zalma on a gravel road at 4:30 p.m. Thelma Camden, 38, Zalma, was cut on her nose when her car collided with another. She was treated at the Southeast Missouri hospital in Cape Girardeau.

ing of President Gamal Abdel Nasser.

Heikal wrote in a full-page editorial that Egypt had frustrated what he called an Israeli plan to attack Syria and had accomplished a blockade of Israeli shipping in the Gulf of Aqaba.

"Egypt finds itself compelled at this stage to stop at what it has accomplished so far, even if this means that we wait to receive a blow from Israel," Heikal wrote.

"Let Israel start. This will be followed by a second blow on our side which will be the death blow."

At the same time, Associated Press Correspondent Hanns Neuerbourg reported from the Jordanian port of Aqaba at the head of the gulf that Egyptian antiaircraft guns apparently fired on two Israeli Mirage jet fighters from Egypt's side of the gulf. But the planes landed apparently undamaged at Elath, the Israeli port two miles across the bay from Aqaba.

Two explosions reverberated around the hilly rim of the gulf shortly before noon and the Mirages returned to Elath from the direction of the Egyptian border.

Earlier in the week Egyptian shore guns fired on an Israeli torpedo boat and forced it to return to Elath.

In a related development, Foreign Secretary George Brown of Britain wound up talks with Soviet leaders and Moscow and said he found the Russians had "an urgent desire to defuse the situation" in the Middle East. He left for London after conferences with Premier Alexai N. Kosygin, President Nikolai V. Podgorny and Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko.

Brown said the Soviet leaders had been officially informed only Thursday night of the French proposal for a joint peace effort by the Soviet Union, the United States, Britain and France.

He said it was too early to expect a Kremlin decision. It was understood by other Westerners in Moscow, however, that the Russians want to seek a solution independently. The Kremlin has lent moral support to the Arabs.

A dispatch from Damascus said Syria had rejected the French proposal, saying: "The Arabs no longer accept guardianship of the Middle East by anyone." President Nasser was reported Thursday to have reacted favorably to the French idea.

American families and other foreigners began hurrying out of the Middle East. Wives and children of U.S. officials in Israel started flying to Rome to wait out the crisis. In Cairo, a U.S. embassy official reported 140 of the 433 American dependents scheduled to leave would depart tonight for Athens, Greece.

Only dependents of U.S. officials — more than 500 women and children— were under orders to leave Israel and Cairo. Between 8,000-10,000 Americans live as permanent residents in Israel but only a few have left. About 3,000 Americans live in Egypt and many of these are making private arrangements for departure.

The United States has advised Americans not on essential business to leave the tense areas.

U.N. Secretary-General U Thant returned to New York Thursday night from his peace mission to Cairo and prepared a report to the Security Council.

President Johnson and Prime Minister Lester B. Pearson agreed at their meeting Thursday in Canada that a solution to the crisis should be left first to the United Nations, Canadian informants at Ottawa reported. They added that Johnson gave no indication that he might take the initiative in calling a Big Four summit conference. This seemed to discount a Canadian official's earlier report that Johnson told Pearson he would propose a summit meeting if U.N. efforts failed.

Israeli Foreign Minister Abba Eban was in Washington and said he hoped to learn from President Johnson what the United States intends to do to open the Gulf of Aqaba if diplomatic efforts fail. The waterway is Israel's only direct route to East Africa and Iranian oil.

Hearnes Agrees To Testimonial Dinner Plans

JEFFERSON CITY (AP) — Gov. Warren E. Hearnes said today he has agreed to plans of his political allies for testimonial dinners this summer to build up a campaign fund in case the governor decides to run for reelection next year.

Hearnes said he has not yet decided whether to run again and only if he makes that decision will the proceeds of the dinners be available for his political campaign.

The money will be held by a board of trustees and if he doesn't run it will be returned to those who contributed, Hearnes said.

He expected there would be two in St. Louis and one in Kansas City, with the price ranging up to $1,000 a plate.

The first will be in St. Louis July 23, a day after the regular birthday testimonial dinner to be held by the Democratic state committee for the governor and Mrs. Hearnes in Jefferson City.

The birthday dinner proceeds will go into the Democratic state committee treasury. Hearnes will be 44 years old July 24. He did not say what age Mrs. Hearnes will attain on that same day.

The governor also said he would do everything in his power to keep Fred T. Wilkinson as director of the Department of Corrections and Harold R. Swenson as warden of Missouri penitentiary.

Both have been concerned in recent months because of the increasing number of damage suits filed against them by inmates of the correctional institutions. The suits seek damages of several million dollars. They have said if the state does nothing to protect them they will resign. Both are veterans of the federal penal system.

A bill to provide liability insurance for them and for the director of mental diseases has been resting in a Senate committee.

Sen. Robert A. Young, D St. An sponsor of the bill, said he ad not realized the situation was so serious. He said he would attempt to get the bill past both houses of the legislature before the session deadline June 30.

The governor said members of his party apparently are taking a "wait and see" attitude about recent charges that U.S. Sen. Edward V. Long, D-Mo., has accepted large fees as a lawyer from Morris Shenker of St. Louis. Shenker is attorney for the convicted chief of the Teamster's Union, James R. Hoffa.

Why do they call you "Baby?"

When a fellow's 10 years old
It seems they'd understand;

Insect Inspector On Hop

COUNTY EXTENSION AGENTS tell Munson of local insect problems. Here Glenn Patton and Elbert Waide, (standing) of the Mississippi county university extension center, discuss a "problem" field. The wheat had been attacked by green bugs and then powdery mildew.

AN INSECT NET is swept through an alfalfa field as Gene Munson, survey entomologist from the University of Missouri in Columbia looks for pests that are eating the crop. Munson travels the state looking for insect outbreaks. His reports help alert farmers.

COLUMBIA -- Somewhere in the state any weekday you can find Gene Munson, Columbia, walking through a field swinging an insect net. He's not chasing butterflies, but looking for new insect pests that could mean serious problems for the state's farmers.

Munson is the state survey entomologist. His job is to travel the state to keep tab on the build-up of insects and to look for new insects. Doing this, he travels some 30,000 miles a year.

Munson is part of an early warning network that can alert farmers to an insect problem before it causes serious crop losses.

By careful searching, which often involves crawling on hands and knees through a field, Munson finds insects that could go unnoticed by a farmer checking his field. Anyone untrained in the habits of insects might not notice them until large numbers were feeding on the crop. This could be too late to prevent damage.

This spring, Munson has been busy tracking the spread of the alfalfa weevil which is working its way across the state. However this pest will soon go dormant for the summer and another insect will pop up to cause problems.

"It's likely the corn borer will start causing us trouble before long," Munson said. "But it could be anything," he added quickly.

With an early warning and advice on what to look for, farmers can check their own fields and apply insect controls when needed before damage results.

Munson's observations, combined with information from other extension entomologists and county extension agents, are published every Friday by the University of Missouri in the Weekly Insect Situation Report. The report is written by George Thomas, Wilfred Craig, and Leroy Peters, extension entomologists.

The report is mailed to county extension centers, vo-ag teachers, commercial insecticide applicators, pesticide dealers, news media, and anyone who can use the information.

Since he can't travel the entire state in any one week, Munson depends on tips on insect activity from many sources.

"Anyone who finds an unusual insect causing damage or finds high populations of insects should report them to the local university extension center or get in touch with me," Munson said.

The survey, officially known as the Cooperative Economic Insect Survey, is conducted jointly by the plant pest control division of USDA, the Missouri Experiment Station, the State Department of Agriculture and the University of Missouri Extension Division.

The idea for the survey was developed in Missouri in 1953. Since then it has been adopted in 28 other states. Thomas was the first survey entomologist.

PASSERSBY AND FARMERS frequently stop to see what Munson's doing. "Sometimes, before I can get out of a field, a whole crowd will gather," he said. Munson uses these occasions to identify for the farmers the insects that are currently causing trouble in the area. Here he answers questions as he bottles up samples of the insects he has collected. Many of the insects collected are returned to Columbia for further study or placement in the University's insect museum.

FREQUENT ROADSIDE STOPS to sweep for insects help Munson keep abreast of insect activity. He travels to all corners of the state, covering 30,000 miles a year. "Some days, when insects are active, I need to be three places at once," Munson said.

A BUGS-EYE-VIEW of a field is best for locating most pests, Munson has found. Often there is a great deal of insect activity beneath the foliage that's not apparent from an overall view of a field. On two occasions, while on hands and knees looking for insects, he has found himself eye to eye with rattlesnakes.

BACK IN HIS OFFICE, in Columbia, Munson seeks identification of insects that could not be identified in the field. Co-workers in the entomology department help with this. His weekly report on insect activities in the state are included in the Weekly Missouri insect situation report mailed every Friday afternoon.

GRAZING ALL THROUGH the crop year is the goal of specialists in the University of Missouri College of Agriculture at Columbia, Research plots, planted to various forage species and mixtures, are being studied in grazing trials to determine what plantings provide the best grazing for different seasons. Forage research plots will be among experimental work seen June 6 during Field Day at the University's Bradford Farm.

8 Advantages To Having Your Own Water Well

"We saw a beautiful lot just outside the city line at a good price. It has lots of space and trees and the air is clean. We'd like the country, but depending on a well for water - that's too primitive for us!"

If you've heard this sentiment expressed, or even said it yourself, consider this: There may be more advantages than disadvantages to having your own well - 8 to be exact. Here's a list from the Plumbing-Heating Cooling Information Bureau:

1. A well, or individual water system as it's more properly called, gives you a wider choice of building sites.

2. You have control over your own water supply. You're not subject to rationing due to drought or to living in an area where population growth has outstripped the municipal system's capacity to meet water demand.

3. Water from a well is usually purer and tastes fresher than the highly treated water that originates from surface streams. Moreover, treatment of well water to assure purity or to remove hardness, etc., where necessary, is easy.

4. The constant high pressure of a properly installed individual water system enables you to make full use of all your water-using equipment. No rationing of water between the bathroom, kitchen and laundry during times of peak use.

5. The constant high pressure offers an effective means of fire-fighting, should one break out.

6. Well water costs nearly 40 percent less than treated surface water. Furthermore, you're protected against periodic increases in water bills.

7. There's nothing "primitive" about an individual water system. The pump is motor driven and is installed in a well that's usually about four inches in diameter. The well is sanitized, then sealed. Water is pumped to a storage tank, and from there it's piped to the various water-using equipment in the house. The pump is controlled to turn on and off automatically, depending upon the water level in the tank, so you never run out of water.

8. There are 10 million individual water systems in the United States, the Bureau says. They serve nearly one-fourth of the total population - on farms, in rural nonfarm areas, in the suburbs and in towns with overtaxed water systems, where wells serve as a supplementary source of water.

Today's water system is a modern convenience rather than a primitive piece of equipment to be accepted only as a last resort. It shouldn't deter you from building "beyond the water mains."

PAUL FLOWERS' GREENHOUSE

Twelve years ago, Richard J. Harkness, extension librarian, University of Tennessee, published a booklet, "Legends of Flowers For Special Days," and had the wisdom to include the old favorites about the dogwood and the redbud.

These stories are told and retold at every Easter season, and never a spring comes without requests from readers of The Commercial Appeal for reprints of the legends.

So here they are again:

THE LEGEND OF THE DOGWOOD

There is a legend that at the time of the Crucifixion the dogwood had been the size of the oak and other forest trees. So firm and strong was the tree that it was chosen as the timber for the cross.

To be used thus for such a cruel purpose greatly distressed the tree, and Jesus, nailed upon it, sensed this, and in His gentle pity for all sorrow and suffering said to it: "Because of your regret and pity for My suffering, never again shall the dogwood tree grow large enough to be used as a cross. Henceforth it shall be slender and bent and twisted and its blossoms shall be in the form of a cross -- two long and two short petals. And in the center of the outer edge of each petal there will be nail prints, brown with rust and stained with red, and in the center of the flower will be a crown of thorns, and all who see it will remember."

LEGEND OF THE REDBUD

There is a legend that when Judas hanged himself on a blossoming tree the tiny, delicate buds clung to the still - bare twigs like snow. But as he died the blossoms, resembling drops of blood, turned purple-red in color. They were stained by blood and consequently the tree was called redbud or Judas Tree thereafter. The bloom definitely resembles a drop of blood both in shape and color, reminding us of the blood that was shed.

It is a symbol of spring, carrying a message of hope and rebirth following the sorrow and suffering as a result of the Crucifixion on Calvary. It stands for the beauty of the loveliness of springtime. Thus the dogwood and the redbud, beautifying the woods and hillside, tell a story that the world will never forget.

The POWER of FAITH By WOODI ISHMAEL

SYMBOL OF FAITH

To the world's 400 million Moslems, the beautiful prayer carpets of Islam are symbols of faith. The faithful are called to pray five times a day wherever they might be because all the earth belongs to Allah. The thing that marks off the prayer site as sacred is the prayer carpet.

The call to prayer is one of the five "pillars" or principal acts of faith of Islam. Islam means "submission" to the will of God, and a Moslem is "one who submits."

Islam, the newest of man's great universal religions, was founded early in the seventh century by Mohammed, who was inspired by the Jewish and Christian worship of one God.

A Family's Share: It's Only $7,000

A U.S. family's share of the national debt is approximately $7,000. With a debt like that, one would not expect to hear, "Oh, it doesn't really matter, because the national debt is something we just owe ourselves."

There are many people who take that attitude, strange as it seems. They should know better, and probably most of them do know better. However, they simply refuse to face the facts about deficit spending and where it will lead.

But facts must be faced.

In a very real sense, government debt is a claim against private property in the same way as an unpaid tax bill: the larger the debt, the smaller is the real equity of individuals in what they think of as their private property.

The size of the debt is important because it measures the amount of money that taxpayers and property owners owe; not to themselves but to a government over which they have lost control to the precise extent that it now owns and controls them. The growing size of the government debt must, therefore, be a matter of very real concern to every creditor and especially to every taxpayer with an interest in keeping his private property and his personal Freedom.

SPENDING WAS NEVER EASY TO STOP

A large part of the national debt has been piled up as a result of government competition with private business. The cost of this competition has been estimated approximately at $40 billion a year. If the federal government would sell shares of stock in government-owned corporations to the American people, that loss would be stopped and a long step back could be taken from the downhill path to socialism.

For 30 years, the American people have lived with a dying dollar. Unsound fiscal policies in the government inevitably lead to inflation; yet, the federal government is operating again at a deficit during the current fiscal year and there is no likelihood that it will escape another deficit next year unless federal spending is drastically reduced.

The American people have watched the process of inflation without making an organized and effective protest because its effects have been largely concealed. However, the effects cannot be concealed forever. What is the use of having more and more dollars in your pocketbook if those dollars are, year after year, worth less and less? That kind of arrangement is bound to end in disaster sooner or later, and we have to think that the danger is near rather than far. The American people have suffered too long from a round of spending, followed by a round of taxes, followed by a new spending, followed by another round of taxes, each one larger than the one that came before.

Government spending needs to be cut and a start needs to be made on reducing the size of the national debt. There are some very specific reasons why it is imperative that these needs be met by the government during the coming year.

To start with, it has to be recognized that spending in itself is not a remedy for any of our economic troubles. That is contrary to the theories of the big spenders, but it is a fact just the same.

Heavy spending by the government does have an impact on the national, economy, but is it a good impact, one that adds strength to the economy? No. Has government spending cured any economic problems up to this time? No. Will it ever cure any? No.

Even when so-called emergency spending to meet economic problems has a temporarily soothing and lulling effect, it is followed after a year or so by all kinds of distortions in the economic system which make the last state of the sick economy much worse than the first. This has been proved time again since the U.S. started trying to spend itself out of the depression of the 1930's. Multiplied billions of dollars were poured out for all kinds of projects, but the depression stayed with us until the demands of war and preparation for war put our production facilities to work.

Another compelling reason for reducing the federal government's reckless outlay of the people's money is that the big spenders have shown that they do not have the ability to manage and guide the sectors of the economy which they take over one by one. Repeatedly we read and hear stories of scandals and near-scandals in federal - supported welfare. Public housing has been a flat failure in its state purpose of providing decent living accommodations for poor people. The foreign policy foisted on the nation by big spenders has been enormously costly in money and friends. Here, again, big spending has been failure.

A third reason why government spending must be reduced is that taxes are used "to get support for greater spending." It is they who are behind the propaganda that this is not the right time to make really significant cuts in spending; it would be too hard to do so now. But the fact is that it will never be any easier. Now is the time to begin, because the future will bring even more tangled and difficult problems.

A necessary beginning is for Congress to regain control of the total budget. Gradually, the Executive Branch has taken control of the total budget from Congress and has held onto it. To be sure, Congress still votes huge appropriations, agency by agency, but it no longer has control over total appropriations.

Once congressional control is regained, new spending programs ought to be blocked. There is much talk of this or that "necessary" new activity by the federal government, but the truth is that there is no proposed new program of spending that the American people can't get along without.

Spending by the numerous welfare agencies has gone beyond reason and should be slashed. The Agriculture Department, the business control bureaus and agencies, federal aid to education; these and many others offer fertile fields for sane economy in the conduct of the federal government.

The Constructive approach calls for a reduction in federal spending that will be really felt, not at some time far distant in the future, but in 1967. As this is a matter of continuing concern to each individual it is hoped that he will make it a matter of continuing study. It is urgent every American learn all he can, from every available source, about where the fiscal policies of the federal government are leading the country . . . .

Two days after Christmas, a tired - looking woman with three youngsters came into our lingerie department to exchange a filmy black - lace nightgown for one in her size. The only black one left in the right size was lined with blue.

"No, it won't do," she sighed. "This is a gift from my husband, and I think what he has in mind is black lined with me!"

Backed Labor Bills Pass

JEFFERSON CITY (AP) — The Missouri House passed and sent to the governor today two bills that have the support of organized labor.

One would increase maximum weekly benefits of unemployment compensation from $45 to $53 next January and to $57 in 1970.

There was no discussion as the House accepted a Senate amendment and passed the bill 124-28.

The other measure would force government agencies to discuss wages, hours and other working conditions with representatives of the employes but any results would not be binding on either the workers or management.

He said it would "force the agency heads to sit down and talk with the employes—discuss the issues." He said the State Highway Department and some colleges, especially, had refused in recent months to negotiate with their workers.

The word negotiate was taken out of the bill by Senate amendment and replaced with the word discuss. Garrett said he saw no difference—just a matter of words.

He said it was not the bill "we wanted but we're happy with it."

Either party to the discussion could take its complaints to the State Board of Mediation or to the circuit court under terms of the bill.

Both measures were amended by the Senate Tuesday.

The unemployment compensation bill was changed to take out the so-called "escalator clause" recommended by Gov. Warren E. Hearnes.

It would set unemployment compensation rates each year at half the average weekly wage in Missouri. The average now is $111 so the unemployment compensation benefits would be set at $55.50 a week.

But the State Chamber of Commerce and the Associated Industries organization opposed that provision so violently the Senate change was made as a compromise.

There was only one amendment to that bill and it was adopted by the House on a 144-7 vote.

There were six amendments to the management-employe discussion bill and they were all adopted on a single vote by the House, 135-15.

The House passed and sent to the Senate a bill to make it possible for the State Tax Commission to come into a county and re-evaluate all property assessments if a political sub-division requests it or if the commission finds there is a variation of 25 per cent from normal.

The bill took up a full day of debate earlier when it was before the House for amendment but Rep. Don Kennedy, D-Nevada, the bill's sponsor, managed to stave off changes.

Rep. Earl L. Sponsler, D-Cabool, said in supporting the bill he is almost sorry to have to vote for it but re-assessment must be done and it is up to the legislature to authorize it.

Rep. William C. Phelps, R-Kansas City, said there hasn't been a re-assessment in Jackson County since 1940 and he is certain one is needed.

It had been an unusually quiet evening at our Fire Alarm Center when suddenly a distraught female voice came in over the emergency phone line.

"My poor Persian cat," the caller cried, "has been up in my walnut tree all day and can't get down. Please send a fire truck and ladder right away."

The operator on duty patiently explained that the policy of rescuing cats from trees had been discontinued 30 years ago because cats had proved their ability to get down from trees by themselves.

The woman insisted, pointing out that she paid taxes for our salaries, and wound up telling us how her pet would starve to death in the tree if we didn't come immediately and rescue him.

The operator's classic answer came over the loudspeaker in every firehouse in our city; "Look, lady -- did you ever see the skeleton of a cat in a tree?"

Hong Kong's Time Running Out

By AP Newsfeatures

Time is running out for the British crown colony of Hong Kong, no matter what the outcome of China's current campaign to cow it.

The basic fact is that most of the colony's real estate -- the New Territories across the harbor from Hong Kong island -- is under a 99-year lease from China, a lease that ends just 30 years from now. As things look this year, there is scant chance the lease will be renewed.

Hong Kong is under the same sort of pressure that brought the Portuguese colony of Macao to its knees earlier this year. The British however, have reacted differently. Although there is no question but that Chinese armed forces could overrun the colony out of hand, the British have indicated they will insist on their right to maintain order.

The confrontation stemmed from the arrest this month of nearly 400 Chinese who rioted in the Kowloon district. Thereafter the Peking government demanded release of the prisoners, punishment for the officials who had put them in custody, and apologies. The British - would have none of it.

Their position is far stronger than their physical strength might indicate. Hong Kong buys vast food supplies from China and provides the Peking government with foreign exchange estimated at half a billion dollars or more annually. This is China's main source of hard currency and something that, in all logic, she would not want to do without. Whether internal pressures and politics might cause her to disregard such practical considerations is something else again.

Facing up to the Chinese dragon is the British governor general, Sir David Trench, an executive council and a legislative council. Sir David's 20,000 armed police and soldiers should be able to keep under control mobs of the magnitude seen thus far, however little they might do against a Chinese army.

They guard one of the finest harbors in the world, through which flows $2.6 billion in trade annually. Hong Kong manufactures a great variety of objects, especially clothing and textiles, and is a trading post for the world.

Its booming economy might very well be affected, however, by the hot breath of China's displeasure.

Britain has been doing business at this crossroad for a century and a quarter. She got title to Hong Kong itself in 1840 after the Opium war in which she established her right, no longer exercised, to trade in the drug. Following the hiatus of Japanese occupation in World War II, and the economic disruption of the Korean war, the colony has come on strong, and now numbers about 3.9 million residents. Of these, 98 per cent are of Chinese extraction, although more than half are British subjects by birth. A million are refugees or immigrants from Red China since the war.

Egypt Declines To Act

By ROY ESSOYAN

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Egypt was reported today to have taken the position that it has achieved its objectives in its military confrontation with Israel and if there is to be war Israel will have to start it.

At the same time, the Soviet Union said it was up to the United States, Britain and other Western powers to restrain Israel.

A Soviet government spokesman said in Moscow the Kremlin has no doubts Egypt and Syria are doing their utmost to keep peace in the Middle East.

"Our understanding is that the source of tension is Israel," the spokesman said. "We believe it is for the United States, Britain and other Western powers to use their influence, to exert their influence on Israel to make it stop its provocations. This will be a real contribution to peace."

The Egyptian position was reported in the semiofficial Cairo newspaper Al Ahram by Mohamed Hassanian Heikal, who often reflects the political think-

Sickal to City Court Judgeship

James D. Sickal, 221 Ruth, has been appointed municipal judge effective June 1, City Manager W. Raymert Miller announced today.

He succeeds Judge Erwin R. Schrader who served seven years, before his death Saturday.

Sickal was born in Clarence. He graduated from the University of Missouri with a doctor of law degree in 1962. He has been associated with the law firm of Blanton, Blanton and Rice one year.

He previously was associated with a law firm in Cape Girardeau.

W. L. George served the position in Judge Schrader's absence.

Northern Lights Viewed in Area

The aurora borealis, rarely seen in Southeast Missouri; presented a dazzling display of luminous red streams of lights accompanied by a few observable bursts Thursday night to Sikeston residents.

The northern lights were observed as far south as Memphis. They should appear again tonight and Saturday night in the northern skies.

The phenomenon occurs only in the summer in the United States.

Graduation Day Sad At Juda Hospital

The first 16 were boys.

"You never can forget," said Donna Lehr, the class secretary. "It keeps coming back. Like Baccalaureate. We marched through the door and you see all the boys. Just boys. Then the girls in a small group.

"There's just you and six others.

"It's still hard to believe. It all seems so farfetched."

The other nine girls in the senior class died in an inferno of burning fuel when a jet airliner

POOR CHARLIE SAYS!

The hearing conducted by the Delta Area Economic Corporation board into the dismissal of Lloyd Phillips and Bill Graves as assistant directors tell a lot about the war on poverty that isn't flattering.

Basically it describes the difficulty in launching a shotgun effort to reduce poverty.

Clyde S. Cahill Jr., attorney for The Office of Economic Opportunity, chided the board for its failure to agree. This is a peculiar position in which an attorney has been placed. The board was divided 12-12 on a motion to reinstate the two after a long controversy during which their usefulness has been impaired.

How does any bureaucrat bring about agreement? It is the nature of human beings to look at things differently and to disagree - the Great Society notwithstanding.

President Lyndon B. Johnson has made the concensus work on numerous occasions in Washington but it is the subject of some legitimate reservation and criticism. Just how do you produce the "uniform voice" that Cahill recommends among people who do not see alike? Admittedly the board of loggerheads does produce problems.

Why was the board established in such a way as to encourage deadlock? Why wasn't it composed of an odd number of directors so that if all were present a majority decision could be reached?

The anti-poverty program was a politically inspired, hurry-up-job designed to change conditions that are as old as man and have been years abuilding.

If a rifle had been used instead of a shotgun, much of the grief in the administration of the program in Southeast Missouri and elsewhere in the country could have been avoided.

When the funds became available performance standards were negligible. The program was loosely designed. It's a wonder that it could function at all in the absence of blueprint. A patchwork, crazy quilt has been applied to a need that required careful research, meticulous planning and expert administration in order to be effective. The poverty program had none of these.

It is no wonder that chaos has resulted.

Questions and answers at the Portageville hearing eloquently tell the story of the confusion that naturally resulted.

It is obvious that the federal government is depending on threatened withdrawal of anti-poverty funds to produce a desired concensus or as Cahill describes it "the uniform voice" so much desired by the bureaucrats.

Whether this arm twising, ramrod, pappa knows best approach will produce flexibility and a cooperative spirit remains to be seen. If it does it will be a departure from history and against human nature as revealed in the immediate past.

There may be no Head Start without a new start.

Given a new program with the new board and new administration the Bootheel war on poverty might get off the ground.

Three times should be a charm.

If chief Thomason shuts off the money because the local committee refuses to reinstate his appointees we'll bet that the local committee can get it reinstated.

Memorial Day signals the beginning of the busiest driving season of the year. There will be more traffic on the road from now until Labor Day than during any other three-month period. Vacations, picnics, just-out-for-a-ride trips, and other summer-time travel will crowd our highways, often beyond their engineered capabilities.

Just the sheer numbers of cars add to the possibility of more accidents. According to the National Safety Council, accident possibilities increase not by the number of cars added to a driving situation but to the square of the number of cars added. If four cars are added, for example, the accident possibility increases by 16, not four.

The one best way people can protect themselves from the highway hazards that go with the warm weather is to drive defensively. Defensive driving is much more than a catchy, alliterative name. It's a method of driving wherein the driver anticipates problems and then takes positive action to avoid the problem.

The best way to learn how to drive defensively is to enroll in a defensive driving course of the type that is available throughout the country.

When a consumer reads an advertisement and seeks out the publicized good for purchase, he is working for free enterprise.

When an editor consents to publish an advertisement, he is aiding the public. When the businessman places an advertisement, he consciously or unconsciously helps to build a better free economy.

Our society is interdependent - that is, it takes many persons and organizations to keep it operating freely and efficiently.

One of the constructive aspects of American society is the institution of advertising. Of course, advertising helps to provide mass distribution and mass production of goods. It results in lower prices for consumers. But it does more than that. It helps keep America free.

Countries in which little or no advertising take place are generally underdeveloped. Most offer little choice of goods for the public. The upsurge in economic activity and amount of luxury goods for sale go hand in hand with advertising. Japan and West Germany are good examples.

Newspapers provide a sounding board for concerned citizens who want to "do their part" to keep America free. Advertisements contribute by supporting a free press.

The backbone of fighters for freedom is and always has been the local newspaper. The press could not retain this role without the financial support which keeps the newspaper free from special pressures.

A miniature town for tiny tots in Mansfield, Ohio, is paying big dividends in the realm of traffic safety.

Since 1937, when "Safety Town" was established to teach safe pedestrian and driving practices to kindergartners and first graders, not one injury or death has been reported among Mansfield children going to and from school on foot.

"Traffic and pedestrian safety as learned by these youngsters is outstanding," according to George H. Calhoun, retired field representative of the Ohio Industrial Commission's Division of Safety and Hygiene. He is a chief sponsor of Safety Town.

Safety Town, located on the schoolground, is a black-topped site that looks like a small village, complete with miniature buildings, marked-out streets, sidewalks, pedestrian crossings and traffic control signs.

Moppets are taught safe traffic habits by being divided into pedestrians and "motorists" who drive on tricycles or in miniature cars.

The program of training at Safety Town, held during the summer and conducted by qualified high school graduates and college students, consists of two parts - classroom instruction in traffic essentials and practical exercises on the streets of Safety Town.

In the classroom, children are taught how to recognize the colors of a traffic signal and what drivers and pedestrians should do when encountering one. Drivers are instructed to stop before reaching the crosswalk, to yield the right of way to pedestrians, to avoid hitting pedestrians even if they are jaywalking.

Pedestrians are taught to wait on curbs while cars go by, to watch for cars in both directions while crossing, to respect traffic signs.

These lessons - including proper hand signals for drivers - are then put into practice - but not without mishap. Violations are similar to those of adults, including failure to stop at red lights and turning from the wrong lane. Offenders are ticketed and their driving privileges are suspended for a time, allowing pedestrians to become motorists.

Beating the boss at gin rummy.

Opening a door and finding on the other side someone you long have wanted to see.

A letter from an old mother saying that everyone back home is doing fine — and so is her flower garden.

Counting the blooms on a lilac bush.

The stunning silence, louder than noise, that suddenly falls on a battlefield when all firing ceases.

The arms-around-shoulders singing of "Auld Lang Syne" at a farewell meeting of men who have fought a war together and know that the peace they won will not separate them forever. Nothing in the world is quite as wistful as that feeling that the price of their victory is the loss of their unity.

Hearing the eager footsteps of someone running gladly to meet you in the dark.

Going window shopping on Fifth Avenue in Manhattan on a lovely summer day, when all the important people have fled to the country.

Listening to an orthodontist say that his overhaul of your young daughter's teeth won't be as extensive — or expensive as you feared.

The relief at learning that an operation of a long-time friend discovered no malignancy.

Standing under a waterfall, and imagining that it is washing away every guilt you've known since you punched the snooty nose of the jeering 5-year-old young lady who beat you at hop scotch in kindergarten.

Strolling in the city at twilight past the open window of an apartment wherein a sweet-voiced woman is playing the piano and singing some old tune, such as "Come Where My Love Lies Dreaming."

Being asked to make an assembly speech by the principal who once threatened to throw you out of high school for cutting capers in study hall.

Getting a $15 raise when your wife had insisted only that you demand $7.50 more.

Watching with a child the flash of a falling star, and making a silent wish that the child would grow up in a finer world than mankind has ever enjoyed before.

Was It Sudden?

PEOPLE NEED PEOPLE

The song I liked best in the hit musical "Funny Girl" is the one that contains the line, "People who need people are the luckiest people in the world."

That man is lucky indeed who discovers that needing people adds immeasurably to the richness of life. People need people to share their joys and sorrows, their triumphs and defeats. For it is in the sharing of such experiences that we are drawn close together in understanding and love.

I like these words from the writings of Elbert Hubbard: "'My heart goes out to you, O man, because I cannot conceive of any being greater, nobler, more heroic, more tenderly loving, loyal, unselfish and enduring than are you. All the love I know is man's love. All the forgiveness I know is man's forgiveness. All the sympathy I know is man's sympathy. The fact that you are a human being brings me near to you. It is a bond that unites us. I understand you because you are a part of myself."

A man alone is incomplete. It is only through others that he finds fulfillment. People need people.

SIXTY-FIVE DAYS TO GO

Representative Edward J. Gurney of Florida has introduced a Resolution in Congress which would designate May 1 as a day of celebration. But, the odds are that government leaders would rather not call the significance of this day to the public's attention.

Regardless of that, Representative Gurney's Resolution has merit. It would hail May 1 as "National Tax Freedom Day". It is the first day of the year that people begin working for themselves. From January 1 until April 30, every dollar the taxpayer earns belongs to the government, he must pay it out in federal, state, or local taxes. In the words of Representative Gurney, "This is simply another way of saying that the average American's tax load is costing him one-third of his income, or 33 cents out of every dollar he earns. Certainly, this day of relief throughout the land deserves to be marked appropriately, and the bill I propose would do this by giving it the status of a national holiday."

As Congress votes more billions to further the ideology of the welfare state, National Tax-Freedom Day will move forward on the calendar. When it reaches July 4, there will no longer be any reason to celebrate American independence. There won't be any.

HAVE A HAPPY
TAX-TIME TRIP!

One of the things that hadn't been said about the Johnson Administration was that its Commerce Department is suffering from a split-personality syndrome and billboard schizophrenia.

This oversight has now been remedied.

Rep. William C. Cramer of Florida has pointed ou to his colleagues in the House that at the very time the Commerce Department's Economic Development Administration is busily putting up roadside signs to plug its projects, the department's Bureau of Public Roads is just as busily drafting regulations to eliminate roadside signs.

And no sooner had he voiced his views than the Internal Revenue Service announced it is gratefully accepting an offer by the Outdoor Advertising Association of America to use 4,000 empty billboards to remind motorists and others that -- ho, ho -- its' time to send in those little old income tax returns.

Those li'l ol' tax reminders aren't likely to win friends or influence voters for LBJ and his administration.

In fact, Rep. Cramer, it looks like friendly old IRS has given you and other Republicans something better than a refund. Congratulations!

As the couple emerged from the church, the husband acknowledged the smiles with which they were greeted, remarking in a whispered aside to his wife: "I'll bet you didn't expect me to make such an impression! It wouldn't surprise me if they wanted my barroom baritone in the church choir."

LOVE THAT FORM 1040

Americans may not be aware of it, but each spring they participate in a major historical miracle: Each April they voluntarily surrender to faceless bureaucrats in Washington a substantial portion of their annual incomes.

To be sure, most of them during the intervening year make involuntary contributions by way of payroll deductions. But even here, the withholding tax is a voluntary act since it was voted by elected legislators.

"The power to tax is the power to destroy" is a well-known aphorism, and throughout human history it has been true. In every age, taxation has been a weapon of oppression and a source of corruption. How is it that Americans have devised systems of taxation which its administrator hails as the most efficient and widely supported the world has ever known?

According to Sheldon S. Cohen, commissioner of Internal Revenue, the fundamental honesty of the American taxpayer is the key. Last year the government indicted fewer than 2,000 out of the 102 million taxpayers for fraud. It took in $100 billion voluntarily, as opposed to $3 billion through direct enforcement efforts.

Another reason, says Cohen, is the confidence of the people in the system. They believe that the tax laws are reasonably fair and are being administered honestly and even-handedly.

"We tend to take this compliance for granted," he says, "but it is really quite remarkable. Very few countries, including those in the Western family of nations, can successfully administer a mass income tax."

Actually, it is only since the beginning of World War II that it has become a mass tax. In its first year, 1913, the income tax affected a mere one per cent of the population.

No one likes to pay taxes; no one ever will. But Americans have come closer to liking it than any other people on earth. Perhaps it is because what they really like is the kind of country their money buys.

H.L. Hunt Says

PRESTIGE OF ELECTORS

Under the Congressional District Plan for reform of the Electoral College system, the prestige of men and women chosen as Electors would be greatly increased. Major political parties would necessarily nominate the best available candidates, who could give one or two days every four years to cast their votes for President of the United States.

Four - fifths of these Electors would serve the voters of districts averaging about 400,000 population. The qualifications and attributes of the candidate for Electors would be quite well known to the voters of his district. In the case of Electors from the state at large, they would be as well known as candidates for governor and other state offices.

The high caliber of candidates for Elector would make them useful in a number of capacities during the campaign. Certainly they would contribute to the reputation of their party and its precepts and principles. They also would add to the acceptability of every party candidate for offices from constable to President.

Their standing would lend added prestige to all members of their party serving in office or who had previously served. Conversely, party members in office would feel a responsibility to the candidate for presidential Elector chosen in a truly democratic way and in turn responsible for the continuation of our Republic as a form of government.

The present system makes mere straw men of Electors. Their names are omitted from the ballot in many states. But with the District Plan in effect they could make a continuing contribution of great value to the nation. HLH.

Washington Merry-Go-Round

By Drew Pearson

WASHINGTON -- The last time Sen. Tom Dodd was invited to the White House for a private tete - a - tete, President Johnson asked him to pass a message to Otto Otepka. Dodd dictated a private memo on the visit.

The senator from Connecticut had eagerly accepted classified documents which Otepka had filched from state department files. When the department tried to discipline its errant employee, Dodd defended Otepka for raiding the files and informing on his superiors.

Cowed by Dodd, the state department kept Otepka on the payroll. Even the President was timid about taking action against Otepka. Sen. Dodd reporting on his White House visit, said in the memo:

"He (LBJ) then started to talk about Otepka. He said he wanted to get a message to Otepka through a third party that he wanted to straighten this matter out. He said, 'I want Otepka to step out of the department and then we will do something good for him'."

But Otepka, protected by Dodd, didn't accept the President's proposition. Dodd's power was such that the man who had slipped him documents out of security files is still drawing his regular salary.

The senator howled a different tune, however, after damaging documents from his own files were turned over to this column. What was good for Otepka, Dodd angrily concluded, was not good for the employees who trifled with his files. The senator hounded them in their new jobs and got most of them fired.

GOP SMEAR IRKS LBJ

The President, after getting the message to Otepka off his chest, gave Dodd another message to deliver to Sen. Jim Eastland, D - Miss., recorded Dodd in the memo on the visit:

"The President thought it was significant that the Republicans are starting to say that he is soft on Communism. He thought I should speak to Eastland and then he said to me, 'you know I am not soft on Communism. I will show them who is soft.' I told him I understood and that I knew he knew that".

Otherwise the White House visit, which, of course, occurred before Dodd's improprieties hit the headlines, was occupied with dogs, politics and praise. Here are other excerpts from Dodd's memo:

"He (the President) said to me, 'I haven't seen the dogs yet.' He then proceeded to step out onto the porch and call the dogs. He finally coaxed them into the office and proceeded to pick up Him by the ears. I mentioned the publicity associated with this, and he said that the dogs had been frightened by the photographers and that it did not hurt them. There was also a big white collie dog there, but he didn't pay any attention to this dog.

"The President then ordered some coffee and we talked. He spoke of his visit to Connecticut (his appearance on Oct. 26, 1963, at a Dodd testimonial). He said it was one of the most interesting days he had spent.

"He asked me about the political situation in Connecticut, and I told him what I thought of it. . . He then said, 'let's talk about that judgeship.' I told him of the situation, and he said he agreed with me. He said, 'however, I don't think you have two good candidates there. I hear neither one can get approved by the bar.' He said, 'get me a good Italian-American candidate or I will have to name Anderson.' (He subsequently named Judge Robert Anderson to the court of appeals.)

KUDOS EXCHANGED

"I told him (LBJ) that he was looking pretty well, better than he looked when I saw him. He said, 'some people say I should take it easy. Don't tell anyone, but I sleep every afternoon'.

"The President knew I had said something about Harry Truman on the floor of the senate. He said that it was a good statement. He then remarked, 'you are going to get famous. You have nominated two men who have become Presidents.' He thought this was very unusual. I replied that perhaps it would be my claim to fame. . .

"Then the President said, 'we have got to go up to the Hill,' I said that I had my car outside, but he said, 'no, you come with me.'

"We drove up to the Hill. He was very effusive and said I was a great friend and how everlasting grateful he was and so on and we sort of exchanged compliments at this point.

"When we got to the Hill, there was a crowd. The President wondered how it was that people always knew he was coming. So we bade each other goodbye, and he said he would see me next week. He asked his chauffeur to take me to my office, but I told the chauffeur he had better not, in case the President needed his car in a hurry. He agreed with me."

Not long afterward, Tom Dodd came under fire for conduct unbecoming a senator. He was never invited back to the White House.

Boyishly handsome Rep. Don Riegle, R-Mich., will go to almost any length to oblige a voter.

With the help of the coast guard, Riegle not only located the island but had a cutter dispatched to fetch the girl to the nearest phone.

Some of the few who recently have talked with the embattled auto union leader report that he is slowly, methodically and quietly maneuvering so he can stay neutral or back a "peace ticket" in '68.

This would smash a 20-year alliance which traces back to the President's first Senate race. Yet the evidence of Reuther's defection is equally as traceable by insiders.

The Detroiter's first move was to refuse to pay his big union's quota of dollars into the AFL-CIO coast - to - coast political network known as COPE (Committee on Political Education). Generally the United Auto Workers contributes about $100,000 annually, on the record, to COPE.

By springtime each year, the UAW has steadily thrown in at least $25,000 of this political action contribution.

But not this year. Not a centime. This financial boycott comes at a time when COPE is beginning early to whip into gear the machinery its leaders believe necessary to reelect Mr. Johnson -- in one of the toughest campaigns any incumbent has ever contemplated. AFL - CIO president George Meany, who gives COPE all the finances and encouragement he can, already has endorsed the President for reelection.

But Walter Reuther has not, though the last UAW Constitutional convention ordered every one of the union's 1264 locals to organize a Citizenship Committee and coordinate it with an Area UAW Citizenship Council. In turn, these units have been ordered to organize -- among the elders, the retirees and especially the young members -- on a "ward, precinct, and block-by-block neighborhood organization."

Couple this with Reuther's drive for "community unions" and one begins to perceive the scope of an independent national political machine which could swing into action in '68.

True, Walter Reuther has as many projects as Peking has wall posters, but these projects generally are reserved for his inspirational public speeches. He must be interpreted by what he does -- or does not -- actually activate.

And he has not ever endorsed President Johnson's Vietnam war policy. To the contrary, in many areas his union and many of his colleagues have been in the avantgarde of the laborite peace movement.

And though one of his recent statements received virtually no national publicity, Reuther himself did take a scathing swing at the administration. Early in May, in Florida, at the United Shoe Workers convention, Reuther said that when it comes to the war in Vietnam, or any other war, the "reactionaries" spend billions of dollars with pleasure but when it comes to social work they give it a drop in the ocean.

This was reported to President Johnson, who did not exactly place it amidst his most loved collection of quotations. But Reuther does not appear disturbed by the President's displeasure.

Until recently, the auto union leader must have been worried by any move which might disaffect Mr. Johnson and provoke him into closing the White House door to Reuther during the auto negotiations. These begin July 6. But Reuther and his intimates now seem quite confident that they shall overcome the auto industry "by October" without Mr. Johnson's help -- and win a big pay increase for their skilled workers, white collar people and a guaranteed work year for those who now are paid by the hour.

Then the Reuther battle timetable calls for conferring with the AFL-CIO high council, making demands on this high command losing this fight and then going to the national AFL - CIO convention in Florida next December. There will come the final conflict. The UAW, of course, expects to lose. Then insiders believe it will call a special convention of its own and pull out of the AFL-CIO.

Thus, by springtime '68, with a fat contract in its pocket and no auto industry negotiations to divert it for almost three years, the big union will turn to national politics.

With commitments to no one with a "Citizenship" political machine hammered into shape by his brother Roy Reuther, Walter can swing into his old flashy style.

But, the sophisticates are asking, for whom and for what will the flash?

POOR CHARLIE SAYS!

The hearing conducted by the Delta Area Economic Corporation board into the dismissal of Lloyd Phillips and Bill Graves as assistant directors tell a lot about the war on poverty that isn't flattering.

Basically it describes the difficulty in launching a shotgun effort to reduce poverty.

Clyde S. Cahill Jr., attorney for The Office of Economic Opportunity, chided the board for its failure to agree. This is a peculiar position in which an attorney has been placed. The board was divided 12-12 on a motion to reinstate the two after a long controversy during which their usefulness has been impaired.

How does any bureaucrat bring about agreement? It is the nature of human beings to look at things differently and to disagree - the Great Society notwithstanding.

President Lyndon B. Johnson has made the concensus work on numerous occasions in Washington but it is the subject of some legitimate reservation and criticism. Just how do you produce the "uniform voice" that Cahill recommends among people who do not see alike? Admittedly the board of loggerheads does produce problems.

Why was the board established in such a way as to encourage deadlock? Why wasn't it composed of an odd number of directors so that if all were present a majority decision could be reached?

The anti-poverty program was a politically inspired, hurry-up-job designed to change conditions that are as old as man and have been years abuilding.

If a rifle had been used instead of a shotgun, much of the grief in the administration of the program in Southeast Missouri and elsewhere in the country could have been avoided.

When the funds became available performance standards were negligible. The program was loosely designed. It's a wonder that it could function at all in the absence of blueprint. A patchwork, crazy quilt has been applied to a need that required careful research, meticulous planning and expert administration in order to be effective. The poverty program had none of these.

It is no wonder that chaos has resulted.

Questions and answers at the Portageville hearing eloquently tell the story of the confusion that naturally resulted.

It is obvious that the federal government is depending on threatened withdrawal of anti-poverty funds to produce a desired concensus or as Cahill describes it "the uniform voice" so much desired by the bureaucrats.

Whether this arm twising, ramrod, pappa knows best approach will produce flexibility and a cooperative spirit remains to be seen. If it does it will be a departure from history and against human nature as revealed in the immediate past.

There may be no Head Start without a new start.

Given a new program with the new board and new administration the Bootheel war on poverty might get off the ground.

Three times should be a charm.

If chief Thomason shuts off the money because the local committee refuses to reinstate his appointees we'll bet that the local committee can get it reinstated.

Memorial Day signals the beginning of the busiest driving season of the year. There will be more traffic on the road from now until Labor Day than during any other three-month period. Vacations, picnics, just-out-for-a-ride trips, and other summer-time travel will crowd our highways, often beyond their engineered capabilities.

Just the sheer numbers of cars add to the possibility of more accidents. According to the National Safety Council, accident possibilities increase not by the number of cars added to a driving situation but to the square of the number of cars added. If four cars are added, for example, the accident possibility increases by 16, not four.

The one best way people can protect themselves from the highway hazards that go with the warm weather is to drive defensively. Defensive driving is much more than a catchy, alliterative name. It's a method of driving wherein the driver anticipates problems and then takes positive action to avoid the problem.

The best way to learn how to drive defensively is to enroll in a defensive driving course of the type that is available throughout the country.

When a consumer reads an advertisement and seeks out the publicized good for purchase, he is working for free enterprise.

When an editor consents to publish an advertisement, he is aiding the public. When the businessman places an advertisement, he consciously or unconsciously helps to build a better free economy.

Our society is interdependent - that is, it takes many persons and organizations to keep it operating freely and efficiently.

One of the constructive aspects of American society is the institution of advertising. Of course, advertising helps to provide mass distribution and mass production of goods. It results in lower prices for consumers. But it does more than that. It helps keep America free.

Countries in which little or no advertising take place are generally underdeveloped. Most offer little choice of goods for the public. The upsurge in economic activity and amount of luxury goods for sale go hand in hand with advertising. Japan and West Germany are good examples.

Newspapers provide a sounding board for concerned citizens who want to "do their part" to keep America free. Advertisements contribute by supporting a free press.

The backbone of fighters for freedom is and always has been the local newspaper. The press could not retain this role without the financial support which keeps the newspaper free from special pressures.

A miniature town for tiny tots in Mansfield, Ohio, is paying big dividends in the realm of traffic safety.

Since 1937, when "Safety Town" was established to teach safe pedestrian and driving practices to kindergartners and first graders, not one injury or death has been reported among Mansfield children going to and from school on foot.

"Traffic and pedestrian safety as learned by these youngsters is outstanding," according to George H. Calhoun, retired field representative of the Ohio Industrial Commission's Division of Safety and Hygiene. He is a chief sponsor of Safety Town.

Safety Town, located on the schoolground, is a black-topped site that looks like a small village, complete with miniature buildings, marked-out streets, sidewalks, pedestrian crossings and traffic control signs.

Moppets are taught safe traffic habits by being divided into pedestrians and "motorists" who drive on tricycles or in miniature cars.

The program of training at Safety Town, held during the summer and conducted by qualified high school graduates and college students, consists of two parts - classroom instruction in traffic essentials and practical exercises on the streets of Safety Town.

In the classroom, children are taught how to recognize the colors of a traffic signal and what drivers and pedestrians should do when encountering one. Drivers are instructed to stop before reaching the crosswalk, to yield the right of way to pedestrians, to avoid hitting pedestrians even if they are jaywalking.

Pedestrians are taught to wait on curbs while cars go by, to watch for cars in both directions while crossing, to respect traffic signs.

These lessons - including proper hand signals for drivers - are then put into practice - but not without mishap. Violations are similar to those of adults, including failure to stop at red lights and turning from the wrong lane. Offenders are ticketed and their driving privileges are suspended for a time, allowing pedestrians to become motorists.

Beating the boss at gin rummy.

Opening a door and finding on the other side someone you long have wanted to see.

A letter from an old mother saying that everyone back home is doing fine — and so is her flower garden.

Counting the blooms on a lilac bush.

The stunning silence, louder than noise, that suddenly falls on a battlefield when all firing ceases.

The arms-around-shoulders singing of "Auld Lang Syne" at a farewell meeting of men who have fought a war together and know that the peace they won will not separate them forever. Nothing in the world is quite as wistful as that feeling that the price of their victory is the loss of their unity.

Hearing the eager footsteps of someone running gladly to meet you in the dark.

Going window shopping on Fifth Avenue in Manhattan on a lovely summer day, when all the important people have fled to the country.

Listening to an orthodontist say that his overhaul of your young daughter's teeth won't be as extensive — or expensive as you feared.

The relief at learning that an operation of a long-time friend discovered no malignancy.

Standing under a waterfall, and imagining that it is washing away every guilt you've known since you punched the snooty nose of the jeering 5-year-old young lady who beat you at hop scotch in kindergarten.

Strolling in the city at twilight past the open window of an apartment wherein a sweet-voiced woman is playing the piano and singing some old tune, such as "Come Where My Love Lies Dreaming."

Being asked to make an assembly speech by the principal who once threatened to throw you out of high school for cutting capers in study hall.

Getting a $15 raise when your wife had insisted only that you demand $7.50 more.

Watching with a child the flash of a falling star, and making a silent wish that the child would grow up in a finer world than mankind has ever enjoyed before.

Was It Sudden?

PEOPLE NEED PEOPLE

The song I liked best in the hit musical "Funny Girl" is the one that contains the line, "People who need people are the luckiest people in the world."

That man is lucky indeed who discovers that needing people adds immeasurably to the richness of life. People need people to share their joys and sorrows, their triumphs and defeats. For it is in the sharing of such experiences that we are drawn close together in understanding and love.

I like these words from the writings of Elbert Hubbard: "'My heart goes out to you, O man, because I cannot conceive of any being greater, nobler, more heroic, more tenderly loving, loyal, unselfish and enduring than are you. All the love I know is man's love. All the forgiveness I know is man's forgiveness. All the sympathy I know is man's sympathy. The fact that you are a human being brings me near to you. It is a bond that unites us. I understand you because you are a part of myself."

A man alone is incomplete. It is only through others that he finds fulfillment. People need people.

SIXTY-FIVE DAYS TO GO

Representative Edward J. Gurney of Florida has introduced a Resolution in Congress which would designate May 1 as a day of celebration. But, the odds are that government leaders would rather not call the significance of this day to the public's attention.

Regardless of that, Representative Gurney's Resolution has merit. It would hail May 1 as "National Tax Freedom Day". It is the first day of the year that people begin working for themselves. From January 1 until April 30, every dollar the taxpayer earns belongs to the government, he must pay it out in federal, state, or local taxes. In the words of Representative Gurney, "This is simply another way of saying that the average American's tax load is costing him one-third of his income, or 33 cents out of every dollar he earns. Certainly, this day of relief throughout the land deserves to be marked appropriately, and the bill I propose would do this by giving it the status of a national holiday."

As Congress votes more billions to further the ideology of the welfare state, National Tax-Freedom Day will move forward on the calendar. When it reaches July 4, there will no longer be any reason to celebrate American independence. There won't be any.

HAVE A HAPPY
TAX-TIME TRIP!

One of the things that hadn't been said about the Johnson Administration was that its Commerce Department is suffering from a split-personality syndrome and billboard schizophrenia.

This oversight has now been remedied.

Rep. William C. Cramer of Florida has pointed ou to his colleagues in the House that at the very time the Commerce Department's Economic Development Administration is busily putting up roadside signs to plug its projects, the department's Bureau of Public Roads is just as busily drafting regulations to eliminate roadside signs.

And no sooner had he voiced his views than the Internal Revenue Service announced it is gratefully accepting an offer by the Outdoor Advertising Association of America to use 4,000 empty billboards to remind motorists and others that -- ho, ho -- its' time to send in those little old income tax returns.

Those li'l ol' tax reminders aren't likely to win friends or influence voters for LBJ and his administration.

In fact, Rep. Cramer, it looks like friendly old IRS has given you and other Republicans something better than a refund. Congratulations!

On the very next Sunday, the couple were seated side by side in the center of the congregation; the husband seemed to be moved by the service, and he joined in singing the final hymn with such enthusiasm that several parishioners in nearby pews were visibly impressed. As the couple emerged from the church, the husband acknowledged the smiles with which they were greeted, remarking in a whispered aside to his wife: "I'll bet you didn't expect me to make such an impression! It wouldn't surprise me if they wanted my barroom baritone in the church choir."

"You did very well, dear," his wife remarked, "except for one small thing. It's Hallelujah, not Hialeah!"

LOVE THAT FORM 1040

Americans may not be aware of it, but each spring they participate in a major historical miracle: Each April they voluntarily surrender to faceless bureaucrats in Washington a substantial portion of their annual incomes.

To be sure, most of them during the intervening year make involuntary contributions by way of payroll deductions. But even here, the withholding tax is a voluntary act since it was voted by elected legislators.

"The power to tax is the power to destroy" is a well-known aphorism, and throughout human history it has been true. In every age, taxation has been a weapon of oppression and a source of corruption. How is it that Americans have devised systems of taxation which its administrator hails as the most efficient and widely supported the world has ever known?

According to Sheldon S. Cohen, commissioner of Internal Revenue, the fundamental honesty of the American taxpayer is the key. Last year the government indicted fewer than 2,000 out of the 102 million taxpayers for fraud. It took in $100 billion voluntarily, as opposed to $3 billion through direct enforcement efforts.

Another reason, says Cohen, is the confidence of the people in the system. They believe that the tax laws are reasonably fair and are being administered honestly and even-handedly.

"We tend to take this compliance for granted," he says, "but it is really quite remarkable. Very few countries, including those in the Western family of nations, can successfully administer a mass income tax."

Actually, it is only since the beginning of World War II that it has become a mass tax. In its first year, 1913, the income tax affected a mere one per cent of the population.

No one likes to pay taxes; no one ever will. But Americans have come closer to liking it than any other people on earth. Perhaps it is because what they really like is the kind of country their money buys.

H.L. Hunt Says

PRESTIGE OF ELECTORS

Under the Congressional District Plan for reform of the Electoral College system, the prestige of men and women chosen as Electors would be greatly increased. Major political parties would necessarily nominate the best available candidates, who could give one or two days every four years to cast their votes for President of the United States.

Four - fifths of these Electors would serve the voters of districts averaging about 400,000 population. The qualifications and attributes of the candidate for Electors would be quite well known to the voters of his district. In the case of Electors from the state at large, they would be as well known as candidates for governor and other state offices.

The high caliber of candidates for Elector would make them useful in a number of capacities during the campaign. Certainly they would contribute to the reputation of their party and its precepts and principles. They also would add to the acceptability of every party candidate for offices from constable to President.

Their standing would lend added prestige to all members of their party serving in office or who had previously served. Conversely, party members in office would feel a responsibility to the candidate for presidential Elector chosen in a truly democratic way and in turn responsible for the continuation of our Republic as a form of government.

The present system makes mere straw men of Electors. Their names are omitted from the ballot in many states. But with the District Plan in effect they could make a continuing contribution of great value to the nation. HLH.

Washington Merry - Go - Round

By Drew Pearson

WASHINGTON -- The last time Sen. Tom Dodd was invited to the White House for a private tete - a - tete, President Johnson asked him to pass a message to Otto Otepka. Dodd dictated a private memo on the visit.

The senator from Connecticut had eagerly accepted classified documents which Otepka had filched from state department files. When the department tried to discipline its errant employee, Dodd defended Otepka for raiding the files and informing on his superiors.

Cowed by Dodd, the state department kept Otepka on the payroll. Even the President was timid about taking action against Otepka. Sen. Dodd reporting on his White House visit, said in the memo:

"He (LBJ) then started to talk about Otepka. He said he wanted to get a message to Otepka through a third party that he wanted to straighten this matter out. He said, 'I want Otepka to step out of the department and then we will do something good for him'."

But Otepka, protected by Dodd, didn't accept the President's proposition. Dodd's power was such that the man who had slipped him documents out of security files is still drawing his regular salary.

The senator howled a different tune, however, after damaging documents from his own files were turned over to this column. What was good for Otepka, Dodd angrily concluded, was not good for the employees who trifled with his files. The senator hounded them in their new jobs and got most of them fired.

GOP SMEAR IRKS LBJ

The President, after getting the message to Otepka off his chest, gave Dodd another message to deliver to Sen. Jim Eastland, D - Miss., recorded Dodd in the memo on the visit:

"The President thought it was significant that the Republicans are starting to say that he is soft on Communism. He thought I should speak to Eastland and then he said to me, 'you know I am not soft on Communism. I will show them who is soft.' I told him I understood and that I knew he knew that".

Otherwise the White House visit, which, of course, occurred before Dodd's improprieties hit the headlines, was occupied with dogs, politics and praise. Here are other excerpts from Dodd's memo:

"He (the President) said to me, 'I haven't seen the dogs yet.' He then proceeded to step out onto the porch and call the dogs. He finally coaxed them into the office and proceeded to pick up Him by the ears. I mentioned the publicity associated with this, and he said that the dogs had been frightened by the photographers and that it did not hurt them. There was also a big white collie dog there, but he didn't pay any attention to this dog.

"The President then ordered some coffee and we talked. He spoke of his visit to Connecticut (his appearance on Oct. 26, 1963, at a Dodd testimonial). He said it was one of the most interesting days he had spent.

"He asked me about the political situation in Connecticut, and I told him what I thought of it. . . He then said, 'let's talk about that judgeship.' I told him of the situation, and he said he agreed with me. He said, 'however, I don't think you have two good candidates there. I hear neither one can get approved by the bar.' He said, 'get me a good Italian-American candidate or I will have to name Anderson.' (He subsequently named Judge Robert Anderson to the court of appeals.')

KUDOS EXCHANGED

"I told him (LBJ) that he was looking pretty well, better than he looked when I saw him. He said, 'some people say I should take it easy. Don't tell anyone, but I sleep every afternoon'.

"The President knew I had said something about Harry Truman on the floor of the senate. He said that it was a good statement. He then remarked, 'you are going to get famous. You have nominated two men who have become Presidents.' He thought this was very unusual. I replied that perhaps it would be my claim to fame. . .

"Then the President said, 'we have got to go up to the Hill,' I said that I had my car outside, but he said, 'no, you come with me.'

"We drove up to the Hill. He was very effusive and said I was a great friend and how everlasting grateful he was and so on and we sort of exchanged compliments at this point.

"When we got to the Hill, there was a crowd. The President wondered how it was that people always knew he was coming. So we bade each other goodbye, and he said he would see me next week. He asked his chauffeur to take me to my office, but I told the chauffeur he had better not, in case the President needed his car in a hurry. He agreed with me."

Not long afterward, Tom Dodd came under fire for conduct unbecoming a senator. He was never invited back to the White House.

ROBIN CRUSOE

Boyishly handsome Rep. Don Riegle, R-Mich., will go to almost any length to oblige a voter.

An excited woman phoned him from Michigan the other day to ask his help in reaching her sister, who was vacationing on a sparsely inhabited desert island off the California coast. The island was so obscure that it had no phones, and no one knew its name.

With the help of the coast guard, Riegle not only located the island but had a cutter dispatched to fetch the girl to the nearest phone.

EXCLUSIVE Reuther Reported Preparing To Back Peace Party in '68.

Some of the few who recently have talked with the embattled auto union leader report that he is slowly, methodically and quietly maneuvering so he can stay neutral or back a "peace ticket" in '68.

This would smash a 20-year alliance which traces back to the President's first Senate race. Yet the evidence of Reuther's defection is equally as traceable by insiders.

The Detroiter's first move was to refuse to pay his big union's quota of dollars into the AFL-CIO coast - to - coast political network known as COPE (Committee on Political Education). Generally the United Auto Workers contributes about $100,000 annually, on the record, to COPE.

By springtime each year, the UAW has steadily thrown in at least $25,000 of this political action contribution.

But not this year. Not a centime. This financial boycott comes at a time when COPE is beginning early to whip into gear the machinery its leaders believe necessary to reelect Mr. Johnson -- in one of the toughest campaigns any incumbent has ever contemplated. AFL - CIO president George Meany, who gives COPE all the finances and encouragement he can, already has endorsed the President for reelection.

But Walter Reuther has not, though the last UAW Constitutional convention ordered every one of the union's 1264 locals to organize a Citizenship Committee and coordinate it with an Area UAW Citizenship Council. In turn, these units have been ordered to organize -- among the elders, the retirees and especially the young members -- on a "ward, precinct, and block -by-block neighborhood organization."

Couple this with Reuther's drive for "community unions" and one begins to perceive the scope of an independent national political machine which could swing into action in '68.

True, Walter Reuther has as many projects as Peking has wall posters, but these projects generally are reserved for his inspirational public speeches. He must be interpreted by what he does -- or does not -- actually activate.

And he has not ever endorsed President Johnson's Vietnam war policy. To the contrary, in many areas his union and many of his colleagues have been in the avantgarde of the laborite peace movement.

And though one of his recent statements received virtually no national publicity, Reuther himself did take a scathing swing at the administration. Early in May, in Florida, at the United Shoe Workers convention, Reuther said that when it comes to the war in Vietnam, or any other war, the "reactionaries" spend billions of dollars with pleasure, but when it comes to social work, they give it a drop in the ocean.

This was reported to President Johnson, who did not exactly place it amidst his most loved collection of quotations. But Reuther does not appear disturbed by the President's displeasure.

Until recently, the auto union leader must have been worried by any move which might disaffect Mr. Johnson and provoke him into closing the White House door to Reuther during the auto negotiations. These begin July 6. But Reuther and his intimates now seem quite confident that they shall overcome the auto industry "by October" without Mr. Johnson's help -- and win a big pay increase for their skilled workers, white collar people and a guaranteed work year for those who now are paid by the hour.

Then the Reuther battle timetable calls for conferring with the AFL-CIO high council, making demands on this high command, losing this fight and then going to the national AFL - CIO convention in Florida next December. There will come the final conflict. The UAW, of course, expects to lose. Then insiders believe it will call a special convention of its own and pull out of the AFL-CIO.

Thus, by springtime '68, with a fat contract in its pocket and no auto industry negotiations to divert it for almost three years, the big union will turn to national politics.

With commitments to no one, with a "Citizenship" political machine hammered into shape by his brother Roy Reuther, Walter can swing into his old flashy style.

But, the sophisticates are asking, for whom and for what will he flash?

Wheeler is the son of Will Wheeler of Portageville. He is employed with the Farmall Company in Moline.

Miss Odel is a 1965 graduate of Portageville high school and employed with the Portageville school district as a secretary.

A June 3 wedding is being planned. It will take place at the Church of the Lord Jesus Christ.

PEOPLE ARE COLORFUL

We're in the pink, and feeling fine
When everything's OK. . . .
Regretting things we say.
Sometimes we're green with envy, at
The thought of others' gold..
And I have often noticed folks
Turn purple. . .when they're cold .
But one thing makes us gray with fear. . . .
And we all know it's true;
The blackest time for all of us. . .
Is when our hearts are blue.

PRIVATE INVITATION ---- "We should never lose sight of the fact, "Sen. George Murphy (R. Calif.) stated, "initially private enterprise built the great cities that dot our land. Nor should we lose sight of the fact that the government programs to rescue and rebuilt our cities for the most part have failed. Private citizens and private enterprise, which built the cities in the first place, should be called upon to repair the cities' ills today."

Samaritans Are Making Comeback

A new survey made in this Jordanian city about 20 miles north of Jerusalem shows that from an all-time low of around 160 the community now is up to 345, with every prospect of increasing.

They have been regarded by the Jews as a dissident Hebrew sect since Old Testament days. Christians have a particular interest in the Samaritans because they are the subject of Jesus' first parable.

High Priest Amram Isaac, a patriarchal figure in dark robes and flaming red turban, attributes the upturn to two factors: the ending of centuries of persecution, and new blood coming in through conversions of outsiders marrying into the community.

The high priests's office goes back to the days of Moses. But he shows with pride the newly built white limestone temple and comfortable houses in the Samaritan quarter of Nablus as evidence of his people's new status as respected citizens of the Jordanian kingdom.

The world's oldest surviving Judaic sect also boasts a modern school, half-supported by the Samaritans, half by the Jordan government.

Amram also will display the Samaritan's most precious relic: the Abisha scroll of the first five books of the Bible, said to be the oldest known copy of the Pentateuch. Although the existing manuscript, on sheepskin, is said to be at least 2,000 years old, the original is dated in the 13th year of the occupation of Canaan by the Israelites 32 centuries ago.

In this ancient revision of the Bible, the Ten Commandments in Exodus are combined with those in Deuteronomy. They contain an extra commandment naming Mt. Gerizim, the holy mountain of the Samaritans, as the holy place of the Lord, instead of Jerusalem.

As the Samaritan woman said to Jesus: "Our fathers worshipped in this mountain; and ye say, that in Jerusalem is the place where men ought to worship."

Because of their belief, the Samaritans not only pray toward that mountain, which overlooks Nablus, but also celebrate their Passover there, in a setting of pastoral simplicity much as it must have been in the days of Moses.

Started Tower

Building of the Tower of London was begun during the reign of William the Conqueror, in 1078. The historic building has served as prison and palace, royal zoo and treasury in the past 890 years.

As the patient from the county walked the city-hospital corridor with his wife, he attempted to interpret the various signs for her: "Pharmacy -- that's the drugstore. Pediatrics -- that's for babies and children. Oral Surgery -- that's where they talk you out of it.

A State Festival Of Champions June 3

JONESBORO, Ark. -- Classy fields of jumpers have been lined up to participate in the long jump, triple jump and high jump events in the Festival of Champions invitational to be staged at Arkansas State University June 3.

Memphis State jumping ace Ted Davis rates as the favorite in one event and a strong contender in another. The Tiger jumper owns one of the South's top marks in the triple jump with a leap of 48 feet, one inch. He also boasts a 23-6 best in the long jump to rate fourth in the field in that event.

Other competitors who will be seeking to defeat Davis include a trio of Arkansas State thinclads who top the state in the triple jump. Paced by Dan Carroll, who has a best of 46-0 1/2, the Indian stars have a monopoly on the event in the state. The only non - A - State triple jumper entered besides Davis is Bob Stewart of Ouachita Baptist who has done 43-2 3/4.

Other ranking A-Staters in the event are Eddie Pruitt with a jump of 45-6 3/4 and Jerald Spencer with a 45-4 3/4.

Two Arkansas AM& N stalwarts are expected to battle it out for the long jump championship with Davis a strong contender. Robert Brown (24-4) and Jesse Sibert (24-0) are the state's top men in that event. Other contenders in the event are David Johnston of State College of Arkansas with a 23-7 jump, John Cunningham of Ouachita (23-5 1/2) and Mike Hunnicutt of Southern State (23-4).

A-State's Jerald Spencer, the state record holder in the high jump, will lead a field that includes Andy Whiddon of Harding (6-6), Sibert of AM&N (6-5) and Butch Brogdon of Arkansas State (6-4).

Tickets for the Festival, sponsored by the Jonesboro Exchange Club, may be ordered from Box DDDD, State College, Ark. 72467.

Practice Runs Today

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind. (AP) — Qualifiers for the 500-mile auto race May 30 were to take their final practice runs at the Indianapolis Motor Speedway today, with track workouts centering on carburetion tests and mechanical adjustments.

Pit crews were allocated three hours practice time after the track was cleared. Smooth and rapid refueling action in the pits is considered a key factor in the Memorial Day race.

The Yankee 300 stock car race at Indianapolis Raceway Park Saturday will provide a weekend interlude for a number of 500 qualifiers. Speedway drivers committed to the stock event over the 1.7-mile course included Mario Andretti, who paced 500 qualifying this year with a record 168.982 m.p.h., and two-time 500 winner A. J. Foyt.

Yankee 300 entrants were to practice this afternoon, with about 55 entries expected to attempt qualifications Saturday morning. The Yankee 300 will start at 2 p.m.

The 500 field will reassemble for the annual drivers' meeting Monday to confer on race rules. The bad start last year, in which 11 cars were eliminated from the race, will be reviewed.

Stranger in Own Home

The barber gave him a regular haircut Thursday, but then his neighbors didn't recognize him and thought a stranger was burglarizing the Minnick home.

Four squad cars answered the burglary call.

"Hey, I live here!" the boy said as he was being led from the house.

Neighbors, after a closer look, realized their mistake.

David was set free.

"In the social area. . . we must not lose sight of our heritage -- the freedom of the individual not only to contribute to progress but to enjoy the fruit of his work. In the economic area we need a more complete understanding of what free competitive enterprice means -- how it works and what it contributes. We need to appreciate that industry and the community -- all of us -- share a mutuality of interests. When a business grows and prospers, the community profits. I need hardly emphasize that a business will not prosper unless its earnings permit the reinvestment of funds to underwrite its growth and to keep its facilities modern. In the international area the fundamental fact today is that our world is one world. We in America are a part of that world."

James M. Roche
President
General Motors

ECONOMY -- "Our federal government," remarked Rep. William Steiger (R. Wis.) "must be run economically and imaginatively. In order to do this effectively, in order to have this kind of government, we must carefully examine the existing structure and make changes which will strengthen the system as well as upgrade it and provide additional economies. Only in this manner will we be able to begin to effectively help reduce the duplication and over-lapping that exist and thus revitalize the programs of our great nation."

Suits Filed In District Courts

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Professional basketball's legal war flared into a million-dollar court showdown Thursday when two more National Basketball Association teams filed suits to try to block the jumping of stars to the new American Basketball Association.

The St. Louis Hawks filed companion suits in U.S. District Court here to enjoin their rookie star, Lou Hudson, from playing with the Minnesota Muskies of the ABA. The Hawks also seek $3 million damages.

The San Francisco Warriors filed suit in San Francisco seeking to prevent Clyde Lee from going to New Orleans of the ABA. The Warriors seek $1 million plus an unspecified amount of damages.

Previously, the Los Angeles Lakers of the NBA filed suit to attempt to stop Jim Barnes from going to Dallas of the ABA.

Hudson, runner-up to Detroit's Dave Bing in the NBA's Rookie-of-the-Year voting this past season, signed a three-year contract with Minnesota last week, reportedly for between $150,000 and $200,000.

Lee, former Vanderbilt All-America, reportedly has signed a two-year, $90,000 contract with New Orleans.

At issue is the reserve clause in NBA contracts, which the established league contends binds a player to a team for at least one year after he completes a contract.

The NBA's reserve clause is similar to that of baseball, but a crucial difference is that baseball enjoys immunity from the antitrust laws under Supreme Court sanction. Basketball has no such solid legal support, and it is under the antitrust laws that ABA attorneys will challenge the NBA contracts.

The NBA reserve clause specifies that when a player's contract is expiring, he is offered a new contract by Sept. 1 of that year. If he does not sign by Oct. 1, the old contract is considered in effect for the coming year, with the player subject to a 25 per cent pay cut.

ASIAN HIGHWAYS PLAN

The idea of linking Asian countries with a network of highways was proposed to a UNESCO sub-committee in 1958. Countries have given high priority to the construction of main and linking roads. The main roads will span more than 14,000 miles.

Priority route A-1 will be 6,000 miles long, running from the Turkish frontier to Saigon, passing through Iran, Afghanistan, West Pakistan, India, East Pakistan, Burma, Thailand and Cambodia.

Priority route A-2, a more southerly road, will run 7,000 miles from the Iraqui border to Indonesia, passing through Iran. West Pakistan, India, Nepal, East Pakistan, Burma, Thailand and Malaysia. A ferry boat will link Singapore with Djakarta in Indonesia.

Four years is not long for the competion of this international road network which will link capitals, trading posts, cultural and historic sites.

Hughes Controls Atlanta

By MIKE RECHT
Associated Press Sports Writer

Dick Hughes, a "wild man in the minor leagues," has opposing hitters in the major leagues under control now after taming down himself.

The St. Louis Cardinal right-hander put down the slugging Atlanta Braves 5-0 Thursday night with a two-hitter, made even brighter because he didn't walk a man.

"That's the first regular season game I ever went nine innings without walking anyone," said the bespectacled 29-year-old rookie. "I did go nine innings once in spring training without a walk, but I was a wild man in the minor leagues."

In the only other National League game, the Chicago Cubs used their bats to bring league-leading Cincinnati under control 5-4 on Ron Santo's tie-breaking single in the ninth inning.

In the American League, Washington beat Cleveland 2-1; Kansas City edged Minnesota 3-2 and Detroit pounded Boston 9-3.

Hughes, making only his fifth start in the majors after struggling nine years in the minors, brought his record to a modest 2-1, the same mark he had with the Cardinals last season when they brought him up at the end of the year.

"He never made it before because he was wild," Cardinal Manager Red Schoendienst said. Hughes was walking more than four men a game in many of his minor league labors, although striking out twice that number.

But with the Cardinals in 1966, he walked only seven men in 21 innings, struck out 20, pitched a 2-0 shutout in his first start and finished with a 1.71 earned run average.

He has pitched 35 innings in 12 games— 10 in relief— this season and walked only 14 while fanning 36 with a 2.83 era.

Santo unloaded off reliever Ted Abernathy with one out after the Cubs loaded the bases against Gerry Arrigo on two walks and an error by Leo Cardenas.

Before that, Randy Hundley of Chicago and Tony Perez of Cincinnati traded two-run homers; Don Kessinger and Adolfo Phillips doubled home runs for the Cubs, and Jim Maloney hit a sacrifice fly and Tommy Helms a run-scoring single for the Reds.

Cal Koonce picked up his first victory with four shutout innings in relief as the surprising Cubs jumped ahead of Atlanta into fourth place.

UCLA Star's Arraignment Today In LA

Police narcotics officers said they found three marijuana cigarettes in an automobile parked in front of Allen's home. They also found about four grams of marijuana in a pocket of a coat in the car, police said.

Officers said they investigated the vehicle because it had no license plates and found a registration slip with Allen's name in the jacket.

Allen said later: "I have never used marijuana. I was out with a friend Monday night, and I think he possibly may have left the marijuana in my car."

Allen did not give the police any information about his friend, narcotics officers said.

On their way to work each morning, several day - maids take the same bus I do. With unvarying regularity they get off at each stop in ones, twos and threes. But at one corner there's a difference.

Before the bus can stop, a small terrier hurls himself out of the nearest house. He pays no attention to two of the maids, but for the third he has a rapturous greeting. From head to tail his nervous little body vibrates with happiness as they disappear into the house.

One day the maid wasn't on the bus. The dog stood at the exit door, his eager welcome shrinking into anxiety. When the driver closed the door, the dog hurried to the front entrance. It too, shut in his face, and gloom filled the bus.

The driver couldn't stand it. He opened the door, looked down at the dog and explained loudly and kindly, "She ain't here today." Then he drove on, satisfied that he'd done the right thing.

FOLLIES OF '66

We've all been reading round-ups of the most important news stories of 1966 - accounts of the major events that seemed to make the globe spin a little faster during the past twelve months.

We thought it might be worth while to record what we consider the most insignificant news events of 1966. These, in our opinion, did not make the terrestrial sphere move any faster; they just made a lot of spectators dizzy with the amount of good, clean newsprint wasted on them:

1. The present status of God and religion as propounded by a member of that learned body The Beatles, whose name escapes us.

2. Various ultimatums presented the people of these United States by one Stokley Carmichael.

3. The earth-shaking controversy over that royally commissioned book by a chap named Manchester.

4. Senator Bobby's humanitarianism toward the Viet Cong, which he thought worthy of his blood.

6. The Columbia Broadcasting System's venture into baseball with what used to be the world champion Yankees.

7. Senator Javits' pitch to become Vice-President (of the United States)

8. Assorted public statements by the Rev. Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr.

9. The heavyweight champion talker, Cassius Clay.

10. The strutting would - be Napoleons - Nkrumah, Sukarno, Mao, Castro, et al.,

The list could be ex.ended. Now with 1967 here, you can start building your own list. Probably the same cast of characters will star in the Follies of 1967.

CONFUSION OF TONGUES

When my college - bred daughter answered the phone, an unfamiliar male voice said, "Come on over, we're waiting for you."

Much annoyed, she inquired, "To whom do you wish to speak?"

There was a long pause, and then the man replied, "I'm sorry! I must have the wrong number. Nobody I know says 'whom'."

A State Festival Of Champions June 3

JONESBORO, Ark. -- Classy fields of jumpers have been lined up to participate in the long jump, triple jump and high jump events in the Festival of Champions invitational to be staged at Arkansas State University June 3.

Memphis State jumping ace Ted Davis rates as the favorite in one event and a strong contender in another. The Tiger jumper owns one of the South's top marks in the triple jump with a leap of 48 feet, one inch. He also boasts a 23-6 best in the long jump to rate fourth in the field in that event.

Other competitors who will be seeking to defeat Davis include a trio of Arkansas State thinclads who top the state in the triple jump. Paced by Dan Carroll, who has a best of 46-0 1/2, the Indian stars have a monopoly on the event in the state. The only non - A - State triple jumper entered besides Davis is Bob Stewart of Ouachita Baptist who has done 43-2 3/4.

Other ranking A-Staters in the event are Eddie Pruitt with a jump of 45-6 3/4 and Jerald Spencer with a 45-4 3/4.

Two Arkansas AM& N stalwarts are expected to battle it out for the long jump championship with Davis a strong contender. Robert Brown (24-4) and Jesse Sibert (24-0) are the state's top men in that event. Other contenders in the event are David Johnston of State College of Arkansas with a 23-7 jump, John Cunningham of Ouachita (23-5 1/2) and Mike Hunnicutt of Southern State (23-4).

A-State's Jerald Spencer, the state record holder in the high jump, will lead a field that includes Andy Whiddon of Harding (6-6), Sibert of AM&N (6-5) and Butch Brogdon of Arkansas State (6-4).

Tickets for the Festival, sponsored by the Jonesboro Exchange Club, may be ordered from Box DDDD, State College, Ark. 72467.

Practice Runs Today

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind. (AP) — Qualifiers for the 500-mile auto race May 30 were to take their final practice runs at the Indianapolis Motor Speedway today, with track workouts centering on carburetion tests and mechanical adjustments.

Pit crews were allocated three hours practice time after the track was cleared. Smooth and rapid refueling action in the pits is considered a key factor in the Memorial Day race.

The Yankee 300 stock car race at Indianapolis Raceway Park Saturday will provide a weekend interlude for a number of 500 qualifiers. Speedway drivers committed to the stock event over the 1.7-mile course included Mario Andretti, who paced 500 qualifying this year with a record 168.982 m.p.h., and two-time 500 winner A. J. Foyt.

Yankee 300 entrants were to practice this afternoon, with about 55 entries expected to attempt qualifications Saturday morning. The Yankee 300 will start at 2 p.m.

The 500 field will reassemble for the annual drivers' meeting Monday to confer on race rules. The bad start last year, in which 11 cars were eliminated from the race, will be reviewed.

Stranger in Own Home

The barber gave him a regular haircut Thursday, but then his neighbors didn't recognize him and thought a stranger was burglarizing the Minnick home.

Four squad cars answered the burglary call.

"Hey, I live here!" the boy said as he was being led from the house.

Neighbors, after a closer look, realized their mistake.

David was set free.

"In the social area. . . we must not lose sight of our heritage -- the freedom of the individual not only to contribute to progress but to enjoy the fruit of his work. In the economic area we need a more complete understanding of what free competitive enterprice means -- how it works and what it contributes. We need to appreciate that industry and the community -- all of us -- share a mutuality of interests. When a business grows and prospers, the community profits. I need hardly emphasize that a business will not prosper unless its earnings permit the reinvestment of funds to underwrite its growth and to keep its facilities modern. In the international area the fundamental fact today is that our world is one world. We in America are a part of that world."

James M. Roche
President
General Motors

ECONOMY -- "Our federal government," remarked Rep. William Steiger (R. Wis.) "must be run economically and imaginatively. In order to do this effectively, in order to have this kind of government, we must carefully examine the existing structure and make changes which will strengthen the system as well as upgrade it and provide additional economies. Only in this manner will we be able to begin to effectively help reduce the duplication and over-lapping that exist and thus revitalize the programs of our great nation."

Santo unloaded off reliever Ted Abernathy with one out after the Cubs loaded the bases against Gerry Arrigo on two walks and an error by Leo Cardenas.

Before that, Randy Hundley of Chicago and Tony Perez of Cincinnati traded two-run homers.

Before that, Randy Hundley of Chicago and Tony Perez of Cincinnati traded two-run homers; Don Kessinger and Adolfo Phillips doubled home runs for the Cubs, and Jim Maloney hit a sacrifice fly and Tommy Helms a run-scoring single for the Reds.

Cal Koonce picked up his first victory with four shutout innings in relief as the surprising Cubs jumped ahead of Atlanta into fourth place.

UCLA Star's Arraignment Today In LA

Police narcotics officers said they found three marijuana cigarettes in an automobile parked in front of Allen's home. They also found about four grams of marijuana in a pocket of a coat in the car, police said.

Officers said they investigated the vehicle because it had no license plates and found a registration slip with Allen's name in the jacket.

Allen said later: "I have never used marijuana. I was out with a friend Monday night, and I think he possibly may have left the marijuana in my car."

Allen did not give the police any information about his friend, narcotics officers said.

On their way to work each morning, several day - maids take the same bus I do. With unvarying regularity they get off at each stop in ones, twos and threes. But at one corner there's a difference.

Before the bus can stop, a small terrier hurls himself out of the nearest house. He pays no attention to two of the maids, but for the third he has a rapturous greeting. From head to tail his nervous little body vibrates with happiness as they disappear into the house.

One day the maid wasn't on the bus. The dog stood at the exit door, his eager welcome shrinking into anxiety. When the driver closed the door, the dog hurried to the front entrance. It too, shut in his face, and gloom filled the bus.

The driver couldn't stand it. He opened the door, looked down at the dog and explained loudly and kindly, "She ain't here today." Then he drove on, satisfied that he'd done the right thing.

FOLLIES OF '66

We've all been reading roundups of the most important news stories of 1966 - accounts of the major events that seemed to make the globe spin a little faster during the past twelve months.

We thought it might be worth while to record what we consider the most insignificant news events of 1966. These, in our opinion, did not make the terrestrial sphere move any faster; they just made a lot of spectators dizzy with the amount of good, clean newsprint wasted on them:

1. The present status of God and religion as propounded by a member of that learned body The Beatles, whose name escapes us.

2. Various ultimatums presented the people of these United States by one Stokley Carmichael.

3. The earth-shaking controversy over that royally commissioned book by a chap named Manchester.

4. Senator Bobby's humanitarianism toward the Viet Cong, which he thought worthy of his blood.

6. The Columbia Broadcasting System's venture into baseball with what used to be the world champion Yankees.

7. Senator Javits' pitch to become Vice-President (of the United States)

8. Assorted public statements by the Rev. Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr.

9. The heavyweight champion talker, Cassius Clay.

10. The strutting would - be Napoleons - Nkrumah, Sukarno, Mao, Castro, et al.,

The list could be ex.ended. Now with 1967 here, you can start building your own list. Probably the same cast of characters will star in the Follies of 1967.

CONFUSION OF TONGUES

When my college - bred daughter answered the phone, an unfamiliar male voice said, "Come on over, we're waiting for you."

Much annoyed, she inquired, "To whom do you wish to speak?"

There was a long pause, and then the man replied, "I'm sorry! I must have the wrong number. Nobody I know says 'whom'."

Militarists Give Israel Fighting Edge Over Arabs

WASHINGTON (AP) — U.S. military experts believe Israel's armed forces, although outnumbered, could defeat the combined Arab armies if the big powers stay out.

These experts give the Israeli is an edge over the Arabs because of what was described as superior training and better equipment maintenance.

Israel's 300,000 soldiers and airmen stack up against some 400,000 armed men in the Arab states surrounding her, latest estimates indicate.

However, while Israel was said to be able to mobilize and deploy her 300,000 men in a matter of days, the Arab armies are believed able to muster much less than their full strength.

Military specialists expect any open war would pit Israel against four Arab countries primarily—Egypt, Jordan, Syria and Lebanon, all of which immediately border on Israel.

Although Iraq and Saudi Arabia have pledged support, the American experts discount their probable effectiveness on the ground.

This is because Iraq has serious problems with rebellious Kurdish tribesmen and the Saudi-Arabians are embroiled in the Yemen civil war, where 40,000 Egyptian troops also are pinned down on the opposite side of the issue.

Some government sources, however, regard as an open question what Arab nations actually might be involved in a war with Israel.

Nearly all are sure Egypt would be joined by Syria in such a battle, but some think Saudi Arabia, Lebanon and Jordan—although forced by internal pressures to take a stance for Arab unity—are too closely aligned with the United States to actually put massive numbers of troops in the field against Israel.

U.S. military men believe Israel would have to array about 100,000 of her troops along the Sinai frontier where the main Egyptian thrust could be expected.

Meanwhile, it was said, Israel probably would have to keep a larger force along her northern and eastern frontiers facing Syria, Lebanon and Jordan.

Israel is only about 40 miles wide at some points in the north and a determined thrust by Jordan's army of 50,000 conceivably could cut the country in half.

American military experts rate the Jordanian army as about the best among the Arab nations.

Syria has about 60,000 men under arms. Of these, about 30,000 are believed deployed near Israel while the other 30,000 are held back deeper inside the country, apparently on guard against internal uprisings.

Lebanon has only 10,000 men and only about 1,500 of these are stationed adjacent to Israel. It is considered doubtful the Lebanese would make much of a contribution to the over-all Arab effort.

Egypt has 190,000 men, many of them already mobilized in the Sinai area.

The Israelis, it was understood, have about 150,000 of their 300,000 troops on active duty.

One big question bearing on the military effectiveness of the Arabs is how well their joint command might work. Such a structure has been in existence for several years.

But there are deep-seated rivalries among the Arab countries. Jordan broke diplomatic relations with Syria this week in a dispute over a mining incident along their common boundary.

Driver Training May Start in First Grade

Russ Walton, assistant state transportation administrator, predicts the 6-year-olds may be zooming around the playground in their own tiny cars in driving safety training.

"We must motivate drivers with lifelong safety habits in the first grade or perhaps even in kindergarten," Walton said Thursday in addressing 6,000 delegates at an annual safety conference.

IF YOU WERE THE JUDGE

BY Jack Strass L.L.D.

THE CASE OF THE EXPOSED NEIGHBOR

At 60 years, Gus didn't give a hoot about anything except his peace and comfort on weekends with an emphasis on the word "comfort." He'd set up a beach chair in his kitchen (near the ice-box where the cold beer was) and lounge around in his B.V.D.s watching a baseball game on his portable TV set. While this might have been fine for Gus, it so upset his neighbor Prudence that she had him arrested on charges of indecent exposure.

"It seemed that every time I turned my head," she complained to a judge, "I'd see Gus's bay window as he walked past his bay window."

"If it unnerved her so much," was Gus's answer, "she shouldn't have looked. While she may be a good woman, she's a good woman in the worst sense of the word."

IF YOU WERE THE JUDGE, would you convict and fine Gus for indecent exposure?

This is how the judge ruled: No! The judge held that a conviction for indecent exposure requires that the exposure be intentional and not accidental; that exposure as a result of carelessness, particularly in the privacy of a home, is not in and of itself a crime.

(Based upon a 1963 Municipal Court of Appeals, D.C., decision)

"Manhattan" was centered in the Boi Loi and Ho Bo Woods near Dau Tieng. This was the first time the woods had been probed by a large force, and it resulted in the destruction of all Viet Cong fortifications found. The area was thought to be an organization and control point for VC terrorist activities.

Pvt. Carmack, a cannoneer in Battery C, 2nd Battalion of the 4th Infantry Division's 77th Artillery and other members of the division accounted for 40 VC dead and recovered more than 250 tons of rice.

Carmack entered on active duty in June 1966 and was stationed at Ft. Sill, Okla. before his arrival in Vietnam last February.

ABERDEEN PROVING GROUND, MD. -- Army Private Thomas E. Vaughn, 19, son of Mr. and Mrs. Doyle E. Vaughn, Essex, Mo., completed a vehicle mechanic course at Aberdeen Proving Ground, Md., May 12.

(JO412) USS ALFRED A. CUNNINGHAM (DD-752) -- Sonar Technician Seaman William L. Voss, USN, son of Mrs. Hobert Voss of 811 E. S. Main St., Dexter, Mo., has returned to Long Beach, Calif., aboard the destroyer USS Cunningham, after six and a half months in the Western Pacific.

During the 188 day deployment, he took part in Tonkin Gulf operations, plane guarding for attack aircraft carriers, search and rescue of downed pilots, surveillance of enemy vessels, and patrol duties in the Taiwan Straite.

Ports visited, by the ship, during the 40,000 mile cruise were Pearl Harbor, Yokosuka and Sasebo, Japan; Kaohsiung and Keelung, Taiwan; Subic Bay, Philippine Islands; Hong Kong; and Midway Island.

CAM RANH BAY, VIETNAM (AHTNC) -- Army Private First Class Robert L. Hamilton, 20, son of Mr. and Mrs. James Hamilton, 528 Lee Ave., Charleston, Mo., was assigned to the 879th Transportation Company near Cam Ranh Bay, Vietnam, May 7.

Pvt. Hamilton, a stevedore, entered the Army in March 1966 and was last stationed at Ft. Sill, Okla.

PLEIKU, VIETNAM (AHTNC) -- Army Private First Class Larry D. Garner, 20, son of Mrs. Ethel Garner, Jackson St., Sikeston, Mo., arrived at the Pleiku, Vietnam, base camp of the 4th Infantry Division, May 17.

Before being assigned to a specific unit, Pvt. Garner received 50 hours of training with the 4th Replacement Detachment.

Garner entered the Army in August 1966.

U. S. ARMY, VIETNAM (AHTNC) -- Army Private First Class Charles W. Taylor, 19, son of Mr. and Mrs. LaRay Taylor, Route 1, Oran, Mo., participated in "Operation Pershing" in the Central Highlands of Vietnam.

Taylor, a rifleman in Company B, 2nd Battalion of the 1st Air Cavalry Division's 12th Cavalry, and his unit were engaged in dragging the Viet Cong from their vast network of tunnels and bunkers. The VC had been driven underground by constant U. S. artillery and air strikes.

The operation has accounted for the capture of several VC and the confiscation of vast stores for food and arms from the enemy.

Answers Your Questions

Dear Ann Landers: I don't sleep in my wife's nightgowns, nor do I wear her girdle, but if I did I can't see that it would be any of your business -- or anyone else's for that matter. Recently I had an experience along these lines and it burned me up.

I have been having trouble with my ankles lately, a general weakness of the muscles. My podiatrist suggested that I walk around the house in my wife's high heels for an hour or two during the evening. The other night the kid who delivers papers came to collect. I answered the door in my wife's high heels. The boy almost died laughing, and now it is all over the neighborhood.

Why are people so eager to put two and two together and get six? I hope you will print my letter and open a few eyes. --- NORMAL NORMAN

Dear Norman: Apparently the eyes are already open. It's the mouths you are having trouble with.

In all fairness, you can hardly blame the kid. One does not expect to see the man of the house klomping around in his wife's shoes. You asked for it.

Dear Ann Landers: What do you think of parents of a working son or daughter who demand a share of that person's salary even though they don't need it?

I am 19, have a good job and want to save some money so I can be married. But how can I save anything when these vultures demand one - fourth of my paycheck every week?

I have been working for seven months but I never had to pay any board or room. Suddenly my folks decided I should contribute to the house. They told me I have no choice --- either contribute or leave. Can they evict me? What are my legal rights? --- SON OF MONEY GRABBERS

Dear Son: Legal rights vary according to the state, but in my opinion, this is not a matter of law, it is a matter of personal integrity.

A boy 19, who is earning money and living at home, should pay something for room and board (and laundry, I'll bet, plus telephone and maid-service. . .etc.) whether his folks need it or not. He should pay because he does not want to be a parasite. Your attitude leaves a lot to be desired, fella.

Dear Ann Landers: Please settle an argument: My fiance and I plan to be married soon. Her family is from another country. None of them will be able to attend the wedding. My parents are giving us the wedding reception as a gift.

The problem is that my parents want us to set all the gifts aside and open them in their presence --- just the four of us. My fiance and I feel that these are OUR gifts and we should not be asked to share the opening with anyone, what do you say? --- FEELINGS AT STAKE.

Dear Feelings: Why be so selfish? Pass the joy around. If they want to be present, let them. It costs you nothing.

Confidential to Worried and Nervous: The answer is no. It is not possible. A 16-year-old girl who would have to ask this question is in desperate need of information. Go to the public library and get "Ann Landers Talks To Teen-Agers About Sex" or buy a paperback.

HOME AIR CONDITIONING NOW A "NECESSITY," SURVEY SHOWS

Just a few years ago, central air conditioning in the home was considered a luxury, to be enjoyed by a lucky few. Now it's considered a necessity by nearly 70 percent of the American population, the Plumbing - Heating - Cooling Information Bureau reports. It's predicted that over 1 million systems will be installed during 1967.

There are several reasons for this, the Bureau notes. They include:

1. Americans are more affluent and can afford air conditioning. Furthermore, it's classified by FHA as a home improvement and thus qualifies for home improvement loans.

2. Americans are exposed to air conditioning everywhere they go --at work, in stores, theaters, restaurants. It's natural to want it at home too.

3. Air conditioning is recommended by many physicians for its health benefits. It eases the strain on heart patients who otherwise might suffer from excessive heat and humidity. It also gives relief to allergy sufferers. Tests have shown that it can reduce the pollen count in a room by as much as 98 percent.

4. The price of home cooling has gone down considerably at the same time that equipment has become more efficient.

If you're thinking of having home cooling installed, be sure to deal with a qualified heating-cooling contractor. There's more involved than just installing equipment. It must be "sized" to your home, and this involves such things as the square feet of the house, its style and prevailing exposure, the number of windows and the directions they face, whether it's insulated, the typography of the area and the size of your family, to name a few.

THE CRUEL ILLUSION

Running like a scarlet thread through the comment of many sincere people who would like to improve the hard lot of the poor, is the basic assumption, often eloquently expressed in words, that this can be done by gaining and using political power. This is the assumption behind the "black power" movement in our country. It is the rallying cry that has forced the writing of much harmful legislation on our statute books.

Does any competent observer who has some knowledge of history believe that economic and social gains can be achieved by the exercise of political powers? People who were obsessed with this type of thinking gained control of Saskatchewan, Canada, from 1944 to 1964, with the result that stagnation and hard times plagued that province far more severely than in the neighboring provinces of British Columbia, Alberta Manitoba. Industrial activity declined, new businesses were not organized, many were discontinued, and there was a general exit of industrial and professional leadership. No doubt many Cubans thought that by gaining political power under the leadership of Fidel Castro, they could solve the economic problems of their country. They have been much hungrier and more deprived ever since they realized their dream.

The hard facts are that economic and social gains cannot be achieved by the coercive exercise of the power of government. That's why the people in all communist lands are short of food, housing, clothing and many of the amenities that most of the poorest people in our country enjoy. The fact of the matter is that far more will be achieved toward relieving poverty and raising the standard of living for our poor people by seeking to help them become more productive.

If we wish to be free, we must stick to the system of rewarding men in proportion to their contribution to the wealth of our country. If one is not earning enough to live comfortably, he should strive to improve his skills and increase his output. That is the sure way to bring him the goods and services he needs and wants. That may appear to be a slow, hard way, but experience shows that it will work. Likewise, experience shows that the political power method which might seem to be faster, is a cruel illusion. Instead of improving the lot of our needy people, it will further impoverish them.

We need an all-out good will effort to help our lower paid workers increase their knowledge and their skills. That may not be spectacular, and it does not greatly arouse emotions, but it will produce the desired results/

Before you sink $6400 into this year's status symbol, slip behind the wheel of the Mercedes-Benz 250S.

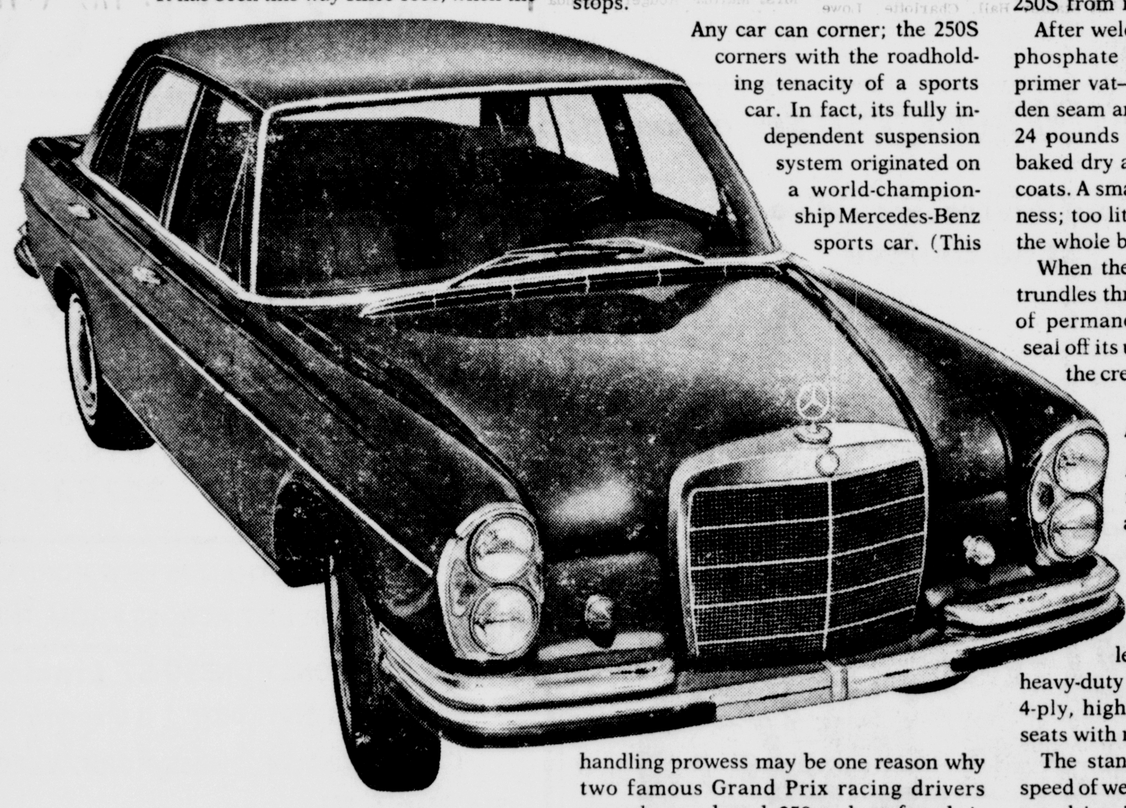
While other $6400 cars preen in their over-styled finery, the Mercedes-Benz 250S performs. It shuns pretense and stresses efficiency—with legitimate advances, like 4-wheel disc brakes and fully independent suspension, that its rivals may not have for years. You can hammer the 250S over cow-paths. You can park it without tears. And it will still be humming along when this year's crop of dreamboats is forgotten.

Read the whole refreshing story.

What makes the Mercedes-Benz 250S so different from its rivals?

The reason is simple. Stylists and cost accountants and marketing geniuses don't dictate the design of Mercedes-Benz cars; engineers do.

It has been this way since 1886, when the company's two founders (both engineers, of course) invented the world's first successful gasoline-powered automobile.



Any car can corner; the 250S corners with the roadholding tenacity of a sports car. In fact, its fully independent suspension system originated on a world-championship Mercedes-Benz sports car. (This handling prowess may be one reason why two famous Grand Prix racing drivers recently purchased 250 sedans for their personal use.)

Any car rides smoothly—on smooth roads. The 250S rides smoothly over potholes, ruts and gravel trails. Credit that sophisticated suspension. And ingenious details like the way front and rear suspension assemblies are rubber-cushioned where they join the chassis.

This suspension "offers a combination of riding comfort and stability that is the standard for comparison," says Road & Track magazine.

Rattles and tremors banned

Most newcomers to the 250S are surprised to find how solid it feels. No odd squeaks, no tiny vibrations. It's as if the whole body were a single, rigid steel structure.

It is. Rather than bolting a body and frame together, Mercedes-Benz combines them in a "unit" body welded at 10,000 points. Sheet steel more than a millimeter thick, and corrugated for extra rigidity, forms the floor section.

Very vital statistics

Few other cars at any price can match the pains Mercedes-Benz takes to protect the 250S from rust and corrosion.

After welding, the body gets a cleansing phosphate bath. Then it plunges into a primer vat—and sits there until every hidden seam and crevice is coated. Emerging 24 pounds of primer heavier, it is then baked dry and covered with three enamel coats. A small device measures paint thickness; too little or too much, and back goes the whole body for a repaint.

When the paint has hardened, the 250S trundles through a booth where 24 pounds of permanent, plasticized undercoating seal off its underside and wheel wells from the creeping menace of corrosion.

About that price

Among the features included in that $6400 price are: 4-speed automatic transmission; power-assisted steering; electrically operated windows; a hydraulic unit at the rear axle that automatically keeps the car riding level, regardless of trunk loads; heavy-duty springs and shock absorbers; 4-ply, high-speed tires; individual front seats with reclining backrests.

The standard engine develops a top speed of well over 100 mph. At the speeds you drive, it is docile and almost silent. And it yields up to 20 miles per gallon in normal use.

For $638 extra, you can order the 250SE engine. Instead of carburetors it uses a fuel-injection system for an approximately 10% gain in overall performance, with no loss in fuel economy.

Because the 250S measures two feet less in overall length than its major $6400 rivals, you might worry that interior space is limited. Far from it; in fact, the 250S matches and in some instances exceeds its competitors in passenger space. Their extra size comes from front and rear overhang and other styling tricks.

The moments of truth

On the open road, the 250S excels precisely where other $6400 cars falter: in those gruelling maneuvers that test the outer margins of performance.

Any car can stop; the 250S can stop, stop, stop—and keep stopping. Unbolt a wheel and you'll see why: caliper-type disc brakes, fitted at each wheel. They're standard equipment. So is the subtle power assist that turns panic stops into smooth, gentle stops.

Mercedes-Benz motor cars: from $25,582* to $4,084*

You may be able to afford a Mercedes-Benz without knowing it. Below are suggested retail prices* for 7 of the 15 Mercedes-Benz models:

600 Grand Mercedes	$25,582
300SE Coupe	11,807
250SE Coupe	9,099
230S Sedan	4,910
230 Sedan	4,280
200 Diesel Sedan	4,305
200 Sedan	4,084

*East and Gulf Coast ports of entry, exclusive of transportation charges, options, state and local taxes if any.

A word on safety

Mercedes-Benz has received widespread publicity about its safety engineering achievements over the past several years.

Work continues to make Mercedes-Benz cars even safer, both in avoiding trouble, and in protecting you if trouble occurs.

For sane drivers, Mercedes-Benz cars can help reduce the hazards of driving—without dulling its pleasures.

But however well engineered it may be, no car can entirely defend against the show-off, the drunkard, or the neurotic bent on self-destruction. Safety depends on you, too.

It has been this way since 1886, when the company's two founders (both engineers, of course) invented the world's first successful gasoline-powered automobile.

Any car can corner; the 250S corners with the roadholding tenacity of a sports car. In fact, its fully independent suspension system originated on a world-championship Mercedes-Benz sports car. (This handling prowess may be one reason why two famous Grand Prix racing drivers recently purchased 250 sedans for their personal use.)

Any car rides smoothly—on smooth roads. The 250S rides smoothly over potholes, ruts and gravel trails. Credit that sophisticated suspension. And ingenious details like the way front and rear suspension assemblies are rubber-cushioned where they join the chassis.

This suspension "offers a combination of riding comfort and stability that is the standard for comparison," says Road & Track magazine.

Rattles and tremors banned

Most newcomers to the 250S are surprised to find how solid it feels. No odd squeaks, no tiny vibrations. It's as if the whole body were a single, rigid steel structure.

It is. Rather than bolting a body and frame together, Mercedes-Benz combines them in a "unit" body welded at 10,000 points. Sheet steel more than a millimeter thick, and corrugated for extra rigidity, forms the floor section.

Very vital statistics

Few other cars at any price can match the pains Mercedes-Benz takes to protect the 250S from rust and corrosion.

After welding, the body gets a cleansing phosphate bath. Then it plunges into a primer vat—and sits there until every hidden seam and crevice is coated. Emerging 24 pounds of primer heavier, it is then baked dry and covered with three enamel coats. A small device measures paint thickness; too little or too much, and back goes the whole body for a repaint.

When the paint has hardened, the 250S trundles through a booth where 24 pounds of permanent, plasticized undercoating seal off its underside and wheel wells from the creeping menace of corrosion.

About that price

Among the features included in that $6400 price are: 4-speed automatic transmission; power-assisted steering; electrically operated windows; a hydraulic unit at the rear axle that automatically keeps the car riding level, regardless of trunk loads; heavy-duty springs and shock absorbers; 4-ply, high-speed tires; individual front seats with reclining backrests.

The standard engine develops a top speed of well over 100 mph. At the speeds you drive, it is docile and almost silent. And it yields up to 20 miles per gallon in normal use.

For $638 extra, you can order the 250SE engine. Instead of carburetors it uses a fuel-injection system for an approximately 10% gain in overall performance, with no loss in fuel economy.

Because the 250S measures two feet less in overall length than its major $6400 rivals, you might worry that interior space is limited. Far from it; in fact, the 250S matches and in some instances exceeds its competitors in passenger space. Their extra size comes from front and rear overhang and other styling tricks.

The moments of truth

On the open road, the 250S excels precisely where other $6400 cars falter: in those gruelling maneuvers that test the outer margins of performance.

Any car can stop; the 250S can stop, stop, stop—and keep stopping. Unbolt a wheel and you'll see why: caliper-type disc brakes, fitted at each wheel. They're standard equipment. So is the subtle power assist that turns panic stops into smooth, gentle stops.

A word on safety

Mercedes-Benz has received widespread publicity about its safety engineering achievements over the past several years.

Work continues to make Mercedes-Benz cars even safer, both in avoiding trouble, and in protecting you if trouble occurs.

For sane drivers, Mercedes-Benz cars can help reduce the hazards of driving—without dulling its pleasures.

But however well engineered it may be, no car can entirely defend against the show-off, the drunkard, or the neurotic bent on self-destruction. Safety depends on you, too.

Mercedes-Benz 250-300 Series Noses Out Rolls-Royce, Buick, Etc., In Reader Poll

NEW YORK—In a unique "Readers' Choice" poll, the 375,000 monthly readers of Car & Driver magazine were asked to select the world's best cars, in 11 categories, and mail in their votes. These knowledgeable automotive enthusiasts responded by the thousands. The results, published in the May 1967 issue of the magazine, award the Mercedes-Benz 250-300 series the title of "Best Luxury and Personal Car." Those who know cars best consider Mercedes-Benz best. A gratifying thought.

Interstate Bridge Is Discussed

CAIRO, ILL. -- The proposed $17 million interstate highway bridge at Cairo is still under discussion by Illinois highway officials.

After Illinois officials conclude discussions with federal authorities and agreements are reached, the Illinois division of highways is expected to enter a construction permit approval.

The four-lane bridge will be part of I-57, which extends from Chicago to Sikeston, Mo., where it will connect with I-55 and other interstate routes in the federal system.

The highway will be the longest interstate in Illinois and is nearly completed from Mt. Vernon to a point about 15 miles north of Cairo. Some of the work for the Cairo area may be let to contract this year.

Preliminary planning for the giant bridge, which will have two 12-foot traffic lanes in each direction divided by a median, is under way. Estimated cost of the project also includes approaches to the bridge on both sides of the Mississippi River.

Location of the proposed bridge will be about 7.5 miles north of the junction of the Mississippi and Ohio Rivers.

Highway officials hope the bridge can be completed by 1970. More studies are expected to be needed when federal authorities give their approval.

Dexter Seeks New Industry

DEXTER -- An effort to gain more industry for Dexter -- with the heavy emphasis placed on industry to employ men -- is starting this week after the appointment of the industrial committee of the Chamber of Commerce by President Percy Clippard.

Bud Davis was elected chairman of the committee at its organizational meeting early this week in the Chamber of Commerce offices. Clippard had previously named Davis, Gordon Hart, Lehman Godwin, Bill Pierce, Frank Hamra, Harold Williams and Claude Arnold as members of the committee, and Davis was elected as chairman from among that group.

We want to make an all-out effort to gain more industry, because more industry is the key to Dexter's further growth and development," Davis said.

He stressed that emphasis would also be placed on "taking care of" the several existing industries here and said that "we must also do all in our power to see that they are happy with Dexter and have all the facilities they need.

Davis said that the committee planned to take its "industry story" to various service and civic clubs here, and urge these clubs and organizations, as well as individuals, to join in "this all-out community effort".

"This has been done elsewhere, with great success, and there is no reason why it cannot be done here," he said. "But," he added, enthusiasm to do it."

The committee plans to make contacts throughout the nation, and make further contact with state officials in Jefferson City concerned with industrial development.

Lippmann Gives Up News Column

NEW YORK (AP) -- Walter Lippmann-- 77 years old and a columnist for 36 years--has announced he is stopping his regular newspaper pieces.

In a brief final installment of his twice-a-week column, he wrote Thursday: "More and more, I have come to wish to get rid of the necessity of knowing, day in and day out, what the blood pressure is at the White House and who said what and who saw whom and who is listened to and who is not listened to."

The Los Angeles Times syndicate had distributed Lippmann's column since the New York World Journal Tribune went out of business recently. The New York Herald Tribune had been the home of his column from 1931 until the paper died last year.

Lippmann said he plans to write articles for newspapers occasionally.

The POWER of FAITH By WOODI ISHMAEL

Once blind, Arthur Wakolee of the Cattaragus Indian tribe in New York state found light through faith and understanding and finally actually regained his eyesight. He was in the fourth grade when his sight failed. Raised by his grandfather and grandmother he learned from them about brotherly love and The Golden Rule, even though they were not Christians.

His grandmother firmly believed that he would see again and fasted and prayed three days at a time for this to happen. In time, Wakolee, now 73 years old, did regain his sight and he heeded grandfather's words: "I want you to go to the white man's church where the sun comes up . . . . they are our brothers and sisters."

Later Wakolee met with Mormon missionaries and learned there was considerable similarity between their teachings and those of his grandparents. He accepted the gospel, was baptized and spent the rest of his life teaching love. He held the presidency of the Mormon Church at Cattaragus.

A Tribute . . . . .

To Our Graduates

Each Spring when Nature bedecks her flowers in their gayest and loveliest raiment, she gives us still another wondrous crop.. youth that is blossoming into young-man-and womanhood. These are our graduates, those sturdy and irrepressible boys and girls to whom all the great world is just unfolding.

With diplomas in their hands and high hopes in their hearts, they step up or out of their educational environment and become a little more mature toward the old, yet ever young in the process of living.

Greet life with your head high and a song in your soul, dear Graduates. You have done well in your classrooms. You will do well on whatever roadway of life you choose to travel. This is our prayer.

You are the hope of America! God Bless every one of You!

The Scott County Central High School held its annual Commencement Exercises at the high school gymnasium on Monday, May 22. Miss Carolyn Stacy and Miss Minnie Mosley were the speakers for the evening. Mr. C.D. Alcorn, president of the s sented the seniors with their diplomas and Mr. Dolan Rogers, principal of the school, presented the eighth grade with their diplomas.

CAPE VISITORS

Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Trost and Diane of Cape Girardeau were Sunday supper guests of Mrs. Martha Rodgers, Glenda and Kenny. Also visiting with Mrs. Rodgers and family were Mr. and Mr. Harry Miller and Rodger of Sikeston, Missouri.

COMPLETES STUDENT TEACHING

Miss Glenda Rodgers, who has been student teaching at Oran High School, will complete her duties there on May 26. Miss Rodgers will return to Cape State this summer to finish her degree in Business Education.

MOVES TO MORLEY

Mr. and Mrs. Gene King and daughter have moved to Morley from Sessor, Illinois. Mrs. King is the former Miss Linda Williams.

SCHOOL PICNIC

RETURNED TO STATES

Mrs. Martha Rodgers has received word that MSgt and Mrs. Paul Rodgers have returned to the states after spending three years in Africa. Msgt. Rodgers is stationed at Witchita Falls, Texas, with the U. S. Air Force, and and he is a former resident of Morley.

TRAVELS TO CAPITOL

Mrs. Margaret Mize and Eva, and Miss Glenda Rodgers spent the weekend in Eldon, Missouri with Mr. and Mrs. Lester Tripplet. They also toured the Capitol building in Jefferson City, and visited Bagnell Dam at the Lake of the Ozarks. Also on their return trip they visited Big Springs State Park at Van Buren, Missouri.

Phillips Enters Governor's Race

JEFFERSON CITY (AP) — Chester A. Phillips, operator of a supermarket at Salem, has become the second to file for the Republican nomination for governor.

First in line was Harry C. Timmerman of Hazelwood, who has been unsuccessful twice before. He filed the day after the general election last November.

Bandit Easy to Please

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Barbara Chapman, 27, was at work as teller of a savings and loan office when an impatient bandit who was easy to please came in.

She dug for money as the holdup demanded, and he finally cut in: "Oh, hell — that's enough."

Later Donald M. Stutsman, 39, surrendered to police and was held on suspicion of staging the holdup. Police said $415 was taken in the robbery Wednesday.

Lippmann Gives Up News Column

NEW YORK (AP) — Walter Lippmann— 77 years old and a columnist for 36 years— has announced he is stopping his regular newspaper pieces.

In a brief final installment of his twice-a-week column, he wrote Thursday: "More and more, I have come to wish to get rid of the necessity of knowing, day in and day out, what the blood pressure is at the White House and who said what and who saw whom and who is listened to and who is not listened to."

The Los Angeles Times syndicate had distributed Lippmann's column since the New York World Journal Tribune went out of business recently. The New York Herald Tribune had been the home of his column from 1931 until the paper died last year.

Lippmann said he plans to write articles for newspapers occasionally.

FOURTH BACHELOR

CALCUTTA (AP) — Weet Bengal state seems to be a good place for bachelors in politics.

The POWER of FAITH

By WOODI ISHMAEL

Once blind, Arthur Wakolee of the Cattaragus Indian tribe in New York state found light through faith and understanding and finally actually regained his eyesight. He was in the fourth grade when his sight failed. Raised by his grandfather and grandmother he learned from them about brotherly love and The Golden Rule, even though they were not Christians.

His grandmother firmly believed that he would see again and fasted and prayed three days at a time for this to happen. In time, Wakolee, now 73 years old, did regain his sight and he heeded grandfather's words: "I want you to go to the white man's church where the sun comes up . . . . they are our brothers and sisters."

Later Wakolee met with Mormon missionaries and learned there was considerable similarity between their teachings and those of his grandparents. He accepted the gospel, was baptized and spent the rest of his life teaching love. He held the presidency of the Mormon Church at Cattaragus.

A Tribute . . . . .

To Our Graduates

Each Spring when Nature bedecks her flowers in their gayest and loveliest raiment, she gives us still another wondrous crop.. youth that is blossoming into young-man-and womanhood. These are our graduates, those sturdy and irrepressible boys and girls to whom all the great world is just unfolding.

With diplomas in their hands and high hopes in their hearts, they step up or out of their educational environment and become a little more mature toward the old, yet ever young in the process of living.

Greet life with your head high and a song in your soul, dear Graduates. You have done well in your classrooms. You will do well on whatever roadway of life you choose to travel. This is our prayer.

You are the hope of America! God Bless every one of You!

President
Bank of Sikeston

Character is something each one of us must build for himself, out of the laws of God and nature, the examples of others, and -- most of all -- out of the trials and errors of daily life. Character is the total of thousands of small daily strivings to live up to the best that is in us. Character is the final decision to reject whatever is demeaning to oneself or to others and with confidence and honestly to choose the right.

crashed behind a motel in a suburb of New Orleans. They were visiting the city on their senior trip.

This is graduation week at Juda and strangely, at first, you see no evidence of grief.

"People aren't flying any black flags or anything," says Paul Matzke, the postmaster. "But it has taken its toll."

The scars of sorrow run deep among the 300 persons who inhabit this hilltop hamlet. They show themselves in small and subtle ways.

A mother stands in the dust near a barn and uses words like "is" and "does" as she talks of a daughter now dead nearly two months.

Even pets mourn. Joyce Kaderly's cat, the one with 23 toes, still prowls restlessly through the house at night.

Seventeen of the seniors sit in a classroom and talk to a stranger about themselves. Dan Leaver, the class valedictorian, says, "We were a close-knit group and this has made us closer. We are all friends and we try not to let it show where it hurts."

The seniors will graduate tonight.

The ceremony will be in the school gymnasium, where memorial services were held for the nine girls on a rainy Sunday in April.

There will be diplomas for the parents of each victim.

"It's not easy," says Mrs. Harry Smith, mother of one of the girls. "It's pretty tough, I tell you. We all go to these things and we cry."

"It's like a funeral," said senior Ron Gruenberg. "You may not think about it all the time and maybe you will tell a joke afterwards and laugh a bit, but it's still in your mind."

For days after the March 30 accident, whenever the school band marched outside to practice in the spring warmth, Mrs. Smith would be gone from the yellow brick house on Main Street. Her daughter Nelva, 17, had been a baton twirler with the band.

Seven girls were in the band. All nine were on the school newspaper staff, and from its pages, fragments of vignettes whisper of the past.

"Nelva, what's keeping you from writing that letter to Mike A.? Does college keep him too busy?"

There was once a summer day and Nelva was Juda's dairy queen, helping serve cheese at the Green County Fair. Mike was a boy from Shullsburg, who walked up to the booth. He went off that fall to begin his college studies at Platteville, but he and Nelva wrote every week.

Joyce Kaderly, 17, and her boy friend had a secret, a wedding date in July. He was a dairy farmer, out of school for two years.

"I was going through some of her things this morning and I found the jewelry store ad she had clipped, for diamond rings," said her mother, Mrs. Edward Kaderly, twisting a ring on her finger. It was Joyce's class ring.

Nancy Siegentahler was a homecoming princess. It was October and a bonfire blazed. She rode in a white convertible. Dan Leaver passed for one touchdown, ran for another. Juda beat New Glarus 20-14. The seniors danced until midnight.

"I'm so lucky," Nancy wrote once in an English essay.

Of the nine girls, only Nancy answered, "No," when the school newspaper asked seniors if they were anxious to graduate.

Janice Siedschlag, 17, was anxious. She had so many plans. She had worked as a nurse's aide the past summer. She thought she might become a nurse or a teacher, or perhaps an airline stewardess.

"She was almost too good," her father said on the day she died. "She pulled more than her fair share of the work. Only one child like that comes along in a family. I almost wanted to hold her back."

Janice wrote in a psychology essay: "No, I can't say I'm a definite overreacher or underachiever. No, I'm not in a rut. I have so many things to do that I don't have time to get in a rut."

Janice, like her cousin, Nelva, was thinking of attending vocational school in Madison. Nelva wanted to be a bookkeeper. Nancy Siegentahler planned to enter the same school, to become a secretary. College would last four years, vocational school only two. It wouldn't interfere if the right boy came along.

Dark-haired, attractive Linda Moe, 18, wanted to be a secretary at the statehouse in Madison. Notice that she had passed the Civil Service test arrived at the two-story frame home on Maine Street the day of her death.

At the Kaderly home east of Juda, a yellow and white tom cat named "Panther," after the school's nickname, sat in the doorway and mewed for two nights after Joyce Kaderly died.

Joyce was proud of "Panther." He has 23 toes, six on each front paw and on one back foot. Joyce loved animals. She had broken three horses for riding, and even as a child she could call the cows by name.

Ed Kaderly, a farmer who has run twice for state senator, is building a new house atop a hill up the road. It looks for miles over the green fertility of southern Wisconsin. Joyce was eager to have a graduation party and housewarming at the same time.

Now few seniors are anxious for graduation night. It will be a night of stiffness and tension, of frustration and regret.

"It seems whenever we take a big step in our life, like graduation, we should all be happy," said Betty Zweifel. "This ruins it."

"It's going to be sad," said Janice Matzke, one of the truly fortunate survivors. She had been registered in the room where the burning fuel hit with greatest impact.

"I stayed at a motel on a trip last Saturday for the first time since then" said Kalk. "I couldn't sleep. I got up and checked the doors, the windows, the fire escape. There was no reason for it. But I couldn't sleep until about 6 a.m."

Mrs. McIntosh Dies Thursday

CHAFFEE -- Mrs. Nellie May McIntosh, 75, of Blodgett, a former Chaffee resident, died at 7 p.m. Thursday in the Missouri Delta Community hospital in Sikeston where she had been a patient four days.

Mrs. McIntosh was born May 7, 1892, in Sikeston, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Masterson.

Survivors are, two daughters, Mrs. Fletcher Withrow, route two, Sikeston, and Mrs. Clyde Watts of St. Louis; two sons, James McIntosh of Cape Girardeau and Edward McIntosh of Houston, Tex.; two brothers, Roy A. Masterson of Sikeston and Harry K. Masterson of Los Angeles; two sisters, Mrs. Archie Laster and Mrs. John Martin, both of Los Angeles; 12 grandchildren and 14 great-grandchildren.

Mrs. McIntosh was a member of the First Baptist church where services will be conducted at 2:30 p.m. Sunday. The Rev. R.L. Robinson, assisted by the Rev. Jimmie Edmondson, pastor of the Blodgett Baptist church, will officiate.

Burial will be in the Union Park cemetery with the Bisplinghoff Funeral Home in charge.

HELP WITH FRUSTRATION

The squad's director, D.D. Diwan, says free advice is provided by experts on social, educational, legal, matrimonial and domestic matters. One day recently it offered advice even on the size refrigerator a man should buy.

The guidance should help dispel anyone's frustrations, he added.

Looking Back Over The Years

May 26, 1917

Miss Josephine Francis arrived Thursday to be the guest of Miss Margaret Harris a few days before going to her home in Ironton. Miss Francis has been attending the Cape Girardeau Normal.

The Misses Mary Thomas and Vivian Ferrell have been assisting Miss Helen Thomas in the Sikeston Farm Loan Co., this week.

The C. F. Bruton Real Estate Co., closed a deal with J. H. Galeener, recently, where the latter bought the west one half of section 28, township 27, range 12 in Stoddard County.

Mrs. J. A. Hess went to Cape Girardeau Tuesday afternoon to attend the Normal School Commencement Exercises. Miss Isabelle Hess, who was a graduate this year, and Miss Helen Hess returned home with Mrs. Hess Thursday.

Mrs. Sophia Edmondson, 80 pioneer Sikeston resident, died at her home, 232 North Ranney Sunday night. Death was attributed to a heart attack.

Sikeston Public Schools have again received a rating as first class schools with 39 1/2 units of credit approved according to a letter received by R. E. Bailey, secretary of the board of education, from H. Pat Wardlaw, director of secondary education for the state of Missouri.

Mr. and Mrs. Earl Jarvis announced Saturday that they had purchased the Ted Kirby home 731 North Ranney, and would take possession the first week in June. Mr. and Mrs. Kirby had formerly purchased the Clyde LaPlant home on Park avenue and plan to move in about the first of the month.

With fishing cutting into the ranks of local golfers, a Sikeston team went down in defeat at Dexter Sunday by a score of 41 to 1 in a match in the Southeast Missouri Round Robin Association. The only Sikeston point was scored by Bob Combs.

The pleasantly packaged young NASA secretary was leaving the Cape Kennedy cafeteria after lunch, happily soaking up the appreciative stares of some 80 men still seated at the tables. When she got to the door, one of the men shouted, "There she goes!" and the entire crowd rushed toward her. She fled in panic, one jump ahead of the pack -- just in time to hear the earsplitting launching of a Titan missile."

HELP WITH FRUSTRATION

The squad's director, D.D. Diwan, says free advice is provided by experts on social, educational, legal, matrimonial and domestic matters. One day recently it offered advice even on the size refrigerator a man should buy.

The guidance should help dispel anyone's frustrations, he added.

Today In U. S. History

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Today's highlight in history:

On this date:

In 1790, Tennessee was organized as a territory.

In 1864, an act of Congress creating Montana territory was approved.

In 1942, a 20-year-treaty of alliance was signed by Britain and the Soviet Union.

In 1942, the Nazis began their drives for Stalingrad and the Caucasus.

In 1946, normal service was restored on U.S. railroads after a strike, and government control ended.

Ten years ago — Disorders subsided in Haiti as Daniel Fignole was sworn in as provisional president.

Five years ago—A United Nations committee said it found no threat to peace as a result of South Africa's racial policies.

One year ago—The U.S. cultural center and library in Hue, South Vietnam, was sacked and burned by young rioters.

Recent developments in constitutional law have brought the rights of the individual in a criminal case a long way. But the rights of the individual in the market place have not yet been fully established.

Today In U. S. History

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Today is Friday, May 26, the 146th day of 1967. There are 219 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On this date:

In 1790, Tennessee was organized as a territory.

In 1805, Napoleon Bonaparte was crowned king of Italy.

In 1864, an act of Congress creating Montana territory was approved.

In 1942, a 20-year-treaty of alliance was signed by Britain and the Soviet Union.

In 1942, the Nazis began their drives for Stalingrad and the Caucasus.

In 1946, normal service was restored on U.S. railroads after a strike, and government control ended.

Ten years ago — Disorders subsided in Haiti as Daniel Fignole was sworn in as provisional president.

Five years ago—A United Nations committee said it found no threat to peace as a result of South Africa's racial policies.

One year ago—The U.S. cultural center and library in Hue, South Vietnam, was sacked and burned by young rioters.

Recent developments in constitutional law have brought the rights of the individual in a criminal case a long way. But the rights of the individual in the market place have not yet been fully established.

Sikeston. At first, the glamor was gone, or rather, the seniors had their wings clipped. For who wanted to stay in Sikeston on graduation night!

The challenge for the committee was set -- to make the 1967 party more enticing than ever. And, looking at the reservation list, it has. There are 267 in the senior class and more than 300 reservations. Dates outside the class were welcome, for a fee.

There was an obvious advantage to not having the party in Paducah, no two-hour bus ride. That meant more time for partying -- perhaps time to take in a movie.

The party begins at 10 p.m. tonight at the Imperial Bowling lanes in Sikeston. By sunup the graduate will have spent four hours dancing to the music of the Memphis Gilloteens in a tropical setting or bowling or playing the free pinball machines. He will have eaten his fill at a catered sit-down Hawaiian feast and for once had all the Cokes he wanted. Every half hour, he had a chance at a door prize.

At 2:30 a.m. he will take a chartered bus to the Malone theater for the Sikeston premiere of a first run movie and then go back to the bowling alley for a morning-after orange juice and doughnut.

And it won't cost him a penny. He earned the money during the school year, $2800, as most Sikeston residents know, by selling candy, greeting cards or even his own services at a slave day.

But he's not a slave at the party. He, the graduate is king, for committes of parents have been working for and with the students for months.

The party begins every year with a meeting for the seniors and their parents, called by the senior class president, this year, Skip Alsup. The parents elect a chairman, this year, Ralph Boyer, and the committee structure is formed.

The successful finance committee was headed by Bill Werneck, with central headquarters at the Castor Alsup home. The suckling pig, the Hawaiian luau and the morning - after coffee and doughnuts were arranged by a committee headed by Mr. and Mrs. John Carr, who were also responsible for transportation.

Palm trees were built, wallpaper fish painted and hung and yardage in fishnet were figured by the women on Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Ziegenhorn's committee.

Chaperones were arranged by Mr. and Mrs. John Hux's committee, entertainment by the Leo Bowman's committee and the location was planned by the Charles Stamp committee.

Each year committee names are different. But the fact that there are committees each year is a tribute to Sikeston residents. For they saw a need and working together, turned a problem into a community asset.

Thursday on North Kingshighway.

Buddy Lee Vanover, William St., was charged Thursday with careless and imprudent driving. He was stopped at Main and Malone.

James Wren, Bertrand, was charged today with driving while intoxicated on East Malone. James E. Wren Jr., Bertrand, was charged today with public intoxication. He was in the car driven by his father when the arrest was made, police said.

John D. Fitzgerel, Morley, was charged today with careless and imprudent driving on East Malone.

Two Injured in Highway Crashes

Two highway collisions resulted in minor injuries Thursday in highway collisions.

A 1958 Chevrolet truck, driven by James Taylor, 32, Malden, attempted a left turn on route D, six miles south of Dexter, at 9:30 a.m. when it was struck by a 1966 Oldsmobile, driven by Peggy Hampton, 37, Dexter.

Mrs. Hampton was treated for shock by a Bloomfield physician.

Five miles north of Zalma on a gravel road at 4:30 p.m. Thelma Camden, 38, Zalma, was cut on her nose when her car collided with another. She was treated at the Southeast Missouri hospital in Cape Girardeau.

ing of President Gamal Abdel Nasser.

Heikal wrote in a full-page editorial that Egypt had frustrated what he called an Israeli plan to attack Syria and had accomplished a blockade of Israeli shipping in the Gulf of Aqaba.

"Egypt finds itself compelled at this stage to stop at what it has accomplished so far, even if this means that we wait to receive a blow from Israel," Heikal wrote.

"Let Israel start. This will be followed by a second blow on our side which will be the death blow."

At the same time, Associated Press Correspondent Hanns Neuerbourg reported from the Jordanian port of Aqaba at the head of the gulf that Egyptian antiaircraft guns apparently fired on two Israeli Mirage jet fighters from Egypt's side of the gulf. But the planes landed apparently undamaged at Elath, the Israeli port two miles across the bay from Aqaba.

Two explosions reverberated around the hilly rim of the gulf shortly before noon and the Mirages returned to Elath from the direction of the Egyptian border.

Earlier in the week Egyptian shore guns fired on an Israeli torpedo boat and forced it to return to Elath.

In a related development, Foreign Secretary George Brown of Britain wound up talks with Soviet leaders and Moscow and said he found the Russians had "an urgent desire to defuse the situation" in the Middle East. He left for London after conferences with Premier Alexai N. Kosygin, President Nikolai V. Podgorny and Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko.

Brown said the Soviet leaders had been officially informed only Thursday night of the French proposal for a joint peace effort by the Soviet Union, the United States, Britain and France.

He said it was too early to expect a Kremlin decision. It was understood by other Westerners in Moscow, however, that the Russians want to seek a solution independently. The Kremlin has lent moral support to the Arabs.

A dispatch from Damascus said Syria had rejected the French proposal, saying: "The Arabs no longer accept guardianship of the Middle East by anyone." President Nasser was reported Thursday to have reacted favorably to the French idea.

American families and other foreigners began hurrying out of the Middle East. Wives and children of U.S. officials in Israel started flying to Rome to wait out the crisis. In Cairo, a U.S. embassy official reported 140 of the 433 American dependents scheduled to leave would depart tonight for Athens, Greece.

Only dependents of U.S. officials — more than 500 women and children — were under orders to leave Israel and Cairo. Between 8,000-10,000 Americans live as permanent residents in Israel but only a few have left. About 3,000 Americans live in Egypt and many of these are making private arrangements for departure.

The United States has advised Americans not on essential business to leave the tense areas.

U.N. Secretary-General U Thant returned to New York Thursday night from his peace mission to Cairo and prepared a report to the Security Council.

President Johnson and Prime Minister Lester B. Pearson agreed at their meeting Thursday in Canada that a solution to the crisis should be left first to the United Nations, Canadian informants at Ottawa reported. They added that Johnson gave no indication that he might take the initiative in calling a Big Four summit conference. This seemed to discount a Canadian official's earlier report that Johnson told Pearson he would propose a summit meeting if U.N. efforts failed.

Israeli Foreign Minister Abba Eban was in Washington and said he hoped to learn from President Johnson what the United States intends to do to open the Gulf of Aqaba if diplomatic efforts fail. The waterway is Israel's only direct route to East Africa and Iranian oil.

Hearnes Agrees To Testimonial Dinner Plans

JEFFERSON CITY (AP) — Gov. Warren E. Hearnes said today he has agreed to plans of his political allies for testimonial dinners this summer to build up a campaign fund in case the governor decides to run for re-election next year.

Hearnes said he has not yet decided whether to run again and only if he makes that decision will the proceeds of the dinners be available for his political campaign.

The money will be held by a board of trustees and if he doesn't run it will be returned to those who contributed, Hearnes said.

He expected there would be two in St. Louis and one in Kansas City, with the price ranging up to $1,000 a plate.

The first will be in St. Louis July 23, a day after the regular birthday testimonial dinner to be held by the Democratic state committee for the governor and Mrs. Hearnes in Jefferson City.

The birthday dinner proceeds will go into the Democratic state committee treasury. Hearnes will be 44 years old July 24. He did not say what age Mrs. Hearnes will attain on that same day.

The governor also said he would do everything in his power to keep Fred T. Wilkinson as director of the Department of Corrections and Harold R. Swenson as warden of Missouri penitentiary.

Both have been concerned in recent months because of the increasing number of damage suits filed against them by inmates of the correctional institutions. The suits seek damages of several million dollars. They have said if the state does nothing to protect them they will resign. Both are veterans of the federal penal system.

A bill to provide liability insurance for them and for the director of mental diseases has been resting in a Senate committee.

Sen. Robert A. Young, D St. An sponsor of the bill, said he ad not realized the situation was so serious. He said he would attempt to get the bill past both houses of the legislature before the session deadline June 30.

The governor said members of his party apparently are taking a "wait and see" attitude about recent charges that U.S. Sen. Edward V. Long, D-Mo., has accepted large fees as a lawyer from Morris Shenker of St. Louis. Shenker is attorney for the convicted chief of the Teamster's Union, James R. Hoffa.

To kiss you in a crowd?
Why do they call you "Baby?"
And always right out loud!

When a fellow's 10 years old
It seems they'd understand;
Pat him gently on the head,
Or politely shake his hand.

Sure, sometimes I hug her eck,
Especially if she's cookin';
Oh, I don't mind a little peck--
If the other guys aren't ookin'.

Sikeston. At first, the glamor was gone, or rather, the seniors had their wings clipped. For who wanted to stay in Sikeston on graduation night!

The challenge for the committee was set -- to make the 1967 party more enticing than ever. And, looking at the reservation list, it has. There are 267 in the senior class and more than 300 reservations. Dates outside the class were welcome, for a fee.

There was an obvious advantage to not having the party in Paducah, no two-hour bus ride. That meant more time for partying -- perhaps time to take in a movie.

The party begins at 10 p.m. tonight at the Imperial Bowling lanes in Sikeston. By sunup the graduate will have spent four hours dancing to the music of the Memphis Gilloteens in a tropical setting or bowling or playing the free pinball machines. He will have eaten his fill at a catered sit-down Hawaiian feast and for once had all the Cokes he wanted. Every half hour, he had a chance at a door prize.

At 2:30 a.m. he will take a chartered bus to the Malone theater for the Sikeston premiere of a first run movie and then go back to the bowling alley for a morning-after orange juice and doughnut.

And it won't cost him a penny. He earned the money during the school year, $2800, as most Sikeston residents know, by selling candy, greeting cards or even his own services at a slave day.

But he's not a slave at the party. He, the graduate is king, for committes of parents have been working for and with the students for months.

The party begins every year with a meeting for the seniors and their parents, called by the senior class president, this year, Skip Alsup. The parents elect a chairman, this year, Ralph Boyer, and the committee structure is formed.

The successful finance committee was headed by Bill Werneck, with central headquarters at the Castor Alsup home. The suckling pig, the Hawaiian luau and the morning - after coffee and doughnuts were arranged by a committee headed by Mr. and Mrs. John Carr, who were also responsible for transportation.

Palm trees were built, wallpaper fish painted and hung and yardage in fishnet were figured by the women on Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Ziegenhorn's committee.

Chaperones were arranged by Mr. and Mrs. John Hux's committee, entertainment by the Leo Bowman's committee and the location was planned by the Charles Stamp committee.

Each year committee names are different. But the fact that there are committees each year is a tribute to Sikeston residents. For they saw a need and working together, turned a problem into a community asset.

Thursday on North Kingshighway.

Buddy Lee Vanover, William St., was charged Thursday with careless and imprudent driving. He was stopped at Main and Malone.

James E. Wren Jr., Bertrand, was charged today with public intoxication. He was in the car driven by his father when the arrest was made, police said.

John D. Fitzgerel, Morley, was charged today with careless and imprudent driving on East Malone.

Two Injured in Highway Crashes

Two highway collisions resulted in minor injuries Thursday in highway collisions.

A 1958 Chevrolet truck, driven by James Taylor, 32, Malden, attempted a left turn on route D, six miles south of Dexter, at 9:30 a.m. when it was struck by a 1966 Oldsmobile, driven by Peggy Hampton, 37, Dexter.

Mrs. Hampton was treated for shock by a Bloomfield physician.

Five miles north of Zalma on a gravel road at 4:30 p.m. Thelma Camden, 38, Zalma, was cut on her nose when her car collided with another. She was treated at the Southeast Missouri hospital in Cape Girardeau.

ing of President Gamal Abdel Nasser.

Heikal wrote in a full-page editorial that Egypt had frustrated what he called an Israeli plan to attack Syria and had accomplished a blockade of Israeli shipping in the Gulf of Aqaba.

"Egypt finds itself compelled at this stage to stop at what it has accomplished so far, even if this means that we wait to receive a blow from Israel," Heikal wrote.

"Let Israel start. This will be followed by a second blow on our side which will be the death blow."

At the same time, Associated Press Correspondent Hanns Neuerbourg reported from the Jordanian port of Aqaba at the head of the gulf that Egyptian antiaircraft guns apparently fired on two Israeli Mirage jet fighters from Egypt's side of the gulf. But the planes landed apparently undamaged at Elath, the Israeli port two miles across the bay from Aqaba.

Two explosions reverberated around the hilly rim of the gulf shortly before noon and the Mirages returned to Elath from the direction of the Egyptian border.

Earlier in the week Egyptian shore guns fired on an Israeli torpedo boat and forced it to return to Elath.

In a related development, Foreign Secretary George Brown of Britain wound up talks with Soviet leaders and Moscow and said he found the Russians had "an urgent desire to defuse the situation" in the Middle East. He left for London after conferences with Premier Alexai N. Kosygin, President Nikolai V. Podgorny and Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko.

Brown said the Soviet leaders had been officially informed only Thursday night of the French proposal for a joint peace effort by the Soviet Union, the United States, Britain and France.

He said it was too early to expect a Kremlin decision. It was understood by other Westerners in Moscow, however, that the Russians want to seek a solution independently. The Kremlin has lent moral support to the Arabs.

A dispatch from Damascus said Syria had rejected the French proposal, saying: "The Arabs no longer accept guardianship of the Middle East by anyone." President Nasser was reported Thursday to have reacted favorably to the French idea.

American families and other foreigners began hurrying out of the Middle East. Wives and children of U.S. officials in Israel started flying to Rome to wait out the crisis. In Cairo, a U.S. embassy official reported 140 of the 433 American dependents scheduled to leave would depart tonight for Athens, Greece.

Only dependents of U.S. officials — more than 500 women and children — were under orders to leave Israel and Cairo. Between 8,000-10,000 Americans live as permanent residents in Israel but only a few have left. About 3,000 Americans live in Egypt and many of these are making private arrangements for departure.

The United States has advised Americans not on essential business to leave the tense areas.

U.N. Secretary-General U Thant returned to New York Thursday night from his peace mission to Cairo and prepared a report to the Security Council.

President Johnson and Prime Minister Lester B. Pearson agreed at their meeting Thursday in Canada that a solution to the crisis should be left first to the United Nations, Canadian informants at Ottawa reported. They added that Johnson gave no indication that he might take the initiative in calling a Big Four summit conference. This seemed to discount a Canadian official's earlier report that Johnson told Pearson he would propose a summit meeting if U.N. efforts failed.

Israeli Foreign Minister Abba Eban was in Washington and said he hoped to learn from President Johnson what the United States intends to do to open the Gulf of Aqaba if diplomatic efforts fail. The waterway is Israel's only direct route to East Africa and Iranian oil.

Hearnes Agrees To Testimonial Dinner Plans

JEFFERSON CITY (AP) — Gov. Warren E. Hearnes said today he has agreed to plans of his political allies for testimonial dinners this summer to build up a campaign fund in case the governor decides to run for re-election next year.

Hearnes said he has not yet decided whether to run again and only if he makes that decision will the proceeds of the dinners be available for his political campaign.

The money will be held by a board of trustees and if he doesn't run it will be returned to those who contributed, Hearnes said.

He expected there would be two in St. Louis and one in Kansas City, with the price ranging up to $1,000 a plate.

The first will be in St. Louis July 23, a day after the regular birthday testimonial dinner to be held by the Democratic state committee for the governor and Mrs. Hearnes in Jefferson City.

The birthday dinner proceeds will go into the Democratic state committee treasury. Hearnes will be 44 years old July 24. He did not say what age Mrs. Hearnes will attain on that same day.

The governor also said he would do everything in his power to keep Fred T. Wilkinson as director of the Department of Corrections and Harold R. Swenson as warden of Missouri penitentiary.

Both have been concerned in recent months because of the increasing number of damage suits filed against them by inmates of the correctional institutions. The suits seek damages of several million dollars. They have said if the state does nothing to protect them they will resign. Both are veterans of the federal penal system.

A bill to provide liability insurance for them and for the director of mental diseases has been resting in a Senate committee.

Sen. Robert A. Young, D St. An sponsor of the bill, said he ad not realized the situation was so serious. He said he would attempt to get the bill past both houses of the legislature before the session deadline June 30.

The governor said members of his party apparently are taking a "wait and see" attitude about recent charges that U.S. Sen. Edward V. Long, D-Mo., has accepted large fees as a lawyer from Morris Shenker of St. Louis. Shenker is attorney for the convicted chief of the Teamster's Union, James R. Hoffa.

KITCHEN SNITCHIN'

Why do Mama always have
To kiss you in a crowd?
Why do they call you "Baby?"
And always right out loud!

When a fellow's 10 years old
It seems they'd understand;
Pat him gently on the head,
Or politely shake his hand.

Sure, sometimes I hug her eck,

Especially if she's cookin';
Oh, I don't mind a little peck—

Insect Inspector On Hop

COUNTY EXTENSION AGENTS tell Munson of local insect problems. Here Glenn Patton and Elbert Waide, (standing) of the Mississippi county university extension center, discuss a "problem" field. The wheat had been attacked by green bugs and then powdery mildew.

COLUMBIA -- Somewhere in the state any weekday you can find Gene Munson, Columbia, walking through a field swinging an insect net. He's not chasing butterflies, but looking for new insect pests that could mean serious problems for the state's farmers.

Munson is the state survey entomologist. His job is to travel the state to keep tab on the build-up of insects and to look for new insects. Doing this, he travels some 30,000 miles a year.

Munson is part of an early warning network that can alert farmers to an insect problem before it causes serious crop losses.

By careful searching, which often involves crawling on hands and knees through a field, Munson finds insects that could go unnoticed by a farmer checking his field. Anyone untrained in the habits of insects might not notice them until large numbers were feeding on the crop. This could be too late to prevent damage.

This spring, Munson has been busy tracking the spread of the alfalfa weevil which is working its way across the state. However this pest will soon go dormant for the summer and another insect will pop up to cause problems.

"It's likely the corn borer will start causing us trouble before long," Munson said. "But it could be anything," he added quickly.

With an early warning and advice on what to look for, farmers can check their own fields and apply insect controls when needed before damage results.

Munson's observations, combined with information from other extension entomologists and county extension agents, are published every Friday by the University of Missouri in the Weekly Insect Situation Report. The report is written by George Thomas, Wilfred Craig, and Leroy Peters, extension entomologists.

The report is mailed to county extension centers, vo-ag teachers, commercial insecticide applicators, pesticide dealers, news media, and anyone who can use the information.

Since he can't travel the entire state in any one week, Munson depends on tips on insect activity from many sources.

"Anyone who finds an unusual insect causing damage or finds high populations of insects should report them to the local university extension center or get in touch with me," Munson said.

The survey, officially known as the Cooperative Economic Insect Survey, is conducted jointly by the plant pest control division of USDA, the Missouri Experiment Station, the State Department of Agriculture and the University of Missouri Extension Division.

The idea for the survey was developed in Missouri in 1953. Since then it has been adopted in 28 other states. Thomas was the first survey entomologist.

PASSERSBY AND FARMERS frequently stop to see what Munson's doing. "Sometimes, before I can get out of a field, a whole crowd will gather," he said. Munson uses these occasions to identify for the farmers the insects that are currently causing trouble in the area. Here he answers questions as he bottles up samples of the insects he has collected. Many of the insects collected are returned to Columbia for further study or placement in the University's insect museum.

AN INSECT NET is swept through an alfalfa field as Gene Munson, survey entomologist from the University of Missouri in Columbia looks for pests that are eating the crop. Munson travels the state looking for insect outbreaks. His reports help alert farmers.

FREQUENT ROADSIDE STOPS to sweep for insects help Munson keep abreast of insect activity. He travels to all corners of the state, covering 30,000 miles a year. "Some days, when insects are active, I need to be three places at once," Munson said.

A BUGS-EYE-VIEW of a field is best for locating most pests, Munson has found. Often there is a great deal of insect activity beneath the foliage that's not apparent from an overall view of a field. On two occasions, while on hands and knees looking for insects, he has found himself eye to eye with rattlesnakes.

BACK IN HIS OFFICE, in Columbia, Munson seeks identification of insects that could not be identified in the field. Co-workers in the entomology department help with this. His weekly report on insect activities in the state are included in the Weekly Missouri insect situation report mailed every Friday afternoon.

GRAZING ALL THROUGH the crop year is the goal of specialists in the University of Missouri College of Agriculture at Columbia, Research plots, planted to various forage species and mixtures, are being studied in grazing trials to determine what plantings provide the best grazing for different seasons. Forage research plots will be among experimental work seen June 6 during Field Day at the University's Bradford Farm.

8 Advantages To Having Your Own Water Well

"We saw a beautiful lot just outside the city line at a good price. It has lots of space and trees and the air is clean. We'd like the country, but depending on a well for water - that's too primitive for us!"

If you've heard this sentiment expressed, or even said it yourself, consider this: There may be more advantages than disadvantages to having your own well - 8 to be exact. Here's a list from the Plumbing-Heating Cooling Information Bureau:

1. A well, or individual water system as it's more properly called, gives you a wider choice of building sites.

2. You have control over your own water supply. You're not subject to rationing due to drought or to living in an area where population growth has outstripped the municipal system's capacity to meet water demand.

3. Water from a well is usually purer and tastes fresher than the highly treated water that originates from surface streams. Moreover, treatment of well water to assure purity or to remove hardness, etc., where necessary, is easy.

4. The constant high pressure of a properly installed individual water system enables you to make full use of all your water-using equipment. No rationing of water between the bathroom, kitchen and laundry during times of peak use.

5. The constant high pressure offers an effective means of fire-fighting, should one break out.

6. Well water costs nearly 40 percent less than treated surface water. Furthermore, you're protected against periodic increases in water bills.

7. There's nothing "primitive" about an individual water system. The pump is motor driven and is installed in a well that's usually about four inches in diameter. The well is sanitized, then sealed. Water is pumped to a storage tank, and from there it's piped to the various water-using equipment in the house. The pump is controlled to turn on and off automatically, depending upon the water level in the tank, so you never run out of water.

8. There are 10 million individual water systems in the United States, the Bureau says. They serve nearly one-fourth of the total population - on farms, in rural nonfarm areas, in the suburbs and in towns with overtaxed water systems, where wells serve as a supplementary source of water.

Today's water system is a modern convenience rather than a primitive piece of equipment to be accepted only as a last resort. It shouldn't deter you from building "beyond the water mains."

PAUL FLOWERS' GREENHOUSE

Twelve years ago, Richard J. Harkness, extension librarian, University of Tennessee, published a booklet, "Legends of Flowers For Special Days," and had the wisdom to include the old favorites about the dogwood and the redbud.

These stories are told and retold at every Easter season, and never a spring comes without requests from readers of The Commercial Appeal for reprints of the legends.

So here they are again:

THE LEGEND OF THE DOGWOOD

There is a legend that at the time of the Crucifixion the dogwood had been the size of the oak and other forest trees. So firm and strong was the tree that it was chosen as the timber for the cross.

To be used thus for such a cruel purpose greatly distressed the tree, and Jesus, nailed upon it, sensed this, and in His gentle pity for all sorrow and suffering said to it: "Because of your regret and pity for My suffering, never again shall the dogwood tree grow large enough to be used as a cross. Henceforth it shall be slender and bent and twisted and its blossoms shall be in the form of a cross -- two long and two short petals. And in the center of the outer edge of each petal there will be nail prints, brown with rust and stained with red, and in the center of the flower will be a crown of thorns, and all who see it will remember."

LEGEND OF THE REDBUD

There is a legend that when Judas hanged himself on a blossoming tree the tiny, delicate buds clung to the still - bare twigs like snow. But as he died the blossoms, resembling drops of blood, turned purple-red in color. They were stained by blood and consequently the tree was called redbud or Judas Tree thereafter. The bloom definitely resembles a drop of blood both in shape and color, reminding us of the blood that was shed.

It is a symbol of spring, carrying a message of hope and rebirth following the sorrow and suffering as a result of the Crucifixion on Calvary. It stands for the beauty of the loveliness of springtime. Thus the dogwood and the redbud, beautifying the woods and hillside, tell a story that the world will never forget.

The POWER of FAITH By WOODI ISHMAEL

SYMBOL OF FAITH

To the world's 400 million Moslems, the beautiful prayer carpets of Islam are symbols of faith. The faithful are called to pray five times a day wherever they might be because all the earth belongs to Allah. The thing that marks off the prayer site as sacred is the prayer carpet.

The call to prayer is one of the five "pillars" or principal acts of faith of Islam. Islam means "submission" to the will of God, and a Moslem is "one who submits."

Islam, the newest of man's great universal religions, was founded early in the seventh century by Mohammed, who was inspired by the Jewish and Christian worship of one God.

8 Advantages To Having Your Own Water Well

"We saw a beautiful lot just outside the city line at a good price. It has lots of space and trees and the air is clean. We'd like the country, but depending on a well for water - that's too primitive for us!"

If you've heard this sentiment expressed, or even said it yourself, consider this: There may be more advantages than disadvantages to having your own well - 8 to be exact. Here's a list from the Plumbing-Heating Cooling Information Bureau:

1. A well, or individual water system as it's more properly called, gives you a wider choice of building sites.

2. You have control over your own water supply. You're not subject to rationing due to drought or to living in an area where population growth has outstripped the municipal system's capacity to meet water demand.

3. Water from a well is usually purer and tastes fresher than the highly treated water that originates from surface streams. Moreover, treatment of well water to assure purity or to remove hardness, etc., where necessary, is easy.

4. The constant high pressure of a properly installed individual water system enables you to make full use of all your water-using equipment. No rationing of water between the bathroom, kitchen and laundry during times of peak use.

5. The constant high pressure offers an effective means of fire-fighting, should one break out.

6. Well water costs nearly 40 percent less than treated surface water. Furthermore, you're protected against periodic increases in water bills.

7. There's nothing "primitive" about an individual water system. The pump is motor driven and is installed in a well that's usually about four inches in diameter. The well is sanitized, then sealed. Water is pumped to a storage tank, and from there it's piped to the various water-using equipment in the house. The pump is controlled to turn on and off automatically, depending upon the water level in the tank, so you never run out of water.

8. There are 10 million individual water systems in the United States, the Bureau says. They serve nearly one-fourth of the total population - on farms, in rural nonfarm areas, in the suburbs and in towns with overtaxed water systems, where wells serve as a supplementary source of water.

Today's water system is a modern convenience rather than a primitive piece of equipment to be accepted only as a last resort. It shouldn't deter you from building "beyond the water mains."

PAUL FLOWERS' GREENHOUSE

Twelve years ago, Richard J. Harkness, extension librarian, University of Tennessee, published a booklet, "Legends of Flowers For Special Days," and had the wisdom to include the old favorites about the dogwood and the redbud.

These stories are told and retold at every Easter season, and never a spring comes without requests from readers of The Commercial Appeal for reprints of the legends.

So here they are again:

THE LEGEND OF THE DOGWOOD

There is a legend that at the time of the Crucifixion the dogwood had been the size of the oak and other forest trees. So firm and strong was the tree that it was chosen as the timber for the cross.

To be used thus for such a cruel purpose greatly distressed the tree, and Jesus, nailed upon it, sensed this, and in His gentle pity for all sorrow and suffering said to it: "Because of your regret and pity for My suffering, never again shall the dogwood tree grow large enough to be used as a cross. Henceforth it shall be slender and bent and twisted and its blossoms shall be in the form of a cross -- two long and two short petals. And in the center of the outer edge of each petal there will be nail prints, brown with rust and stained with red, and in the center of the flower will be a crown of thorns, and all who see it will remember."

LEGEND OF THE REDBUD

There is a legend that when Judas hanged himself on a blossoming tree the tiny, delicate buds clung to the still - bare twigs like snow. But as he died the blossoms, resembling drops of blood, turned purple-red in color. They were stained by blood and consequently the tree was called redbud or Judas Tree thereafter. The bloom definitely resembles a drop of blood both in shape and color, reminding us of the blood that was shed.

It is a symbol of spring, carrying a message of hope and rebirth following the sorrow and suffering as a result of the Crucifixion on Calvary. It stands for the beauty of the loveliness of springtime. Thus the dogwood and the redbud, beautifying the woods and hillside, tell a story that the world will never forget.

Chapman Heads Housing Council

JEFFERSON CITY --A Statewide Missouri Coordinating Council on Fair Housing has been organized here.

Officers elected to head the council were chairman, Rev. William D. Chapman of Kennett; vice chairman, Miss Sandra Neese; secretary, Mrs. Clifford Von Der Bruegge; treasurer, Dr. Frank N. Butler, all of Jefferson City.

PEEP OUT,
DAFFODIL, PLEASE
Take this icy wind and snow
Back up north to the Eskimo;
I'm bootless and my clothes are thin.
I've got no furs to huddle in;
The house seems drafty, furnace slow--
I've no kinship with the Eskimo.
While shaking, freezing, chattering
I'm looking for comes of spring.

The POWER of FAITH By WOODI ISHMAEL

SYMBOL OF FAITH

To the world's 400 million Moslems, the beautiful prayer carpets of Islam are symbols of faith. The faithful are called to pray five times a day wherever they might be because all the earth belongs to Allah. The thing that marks off the prayer site as sacred is the prayer carpet.

The call to prayer is one of the five "pillars" or principal acts of faith of Islam. Islam means "submission" to the will of God, and a Moslem is "one who submits."

Islam, the newest of man's great universal religions, was founded early in the seventh century by Mohammed, who was inspired by the Jewish and Christian worship of one God.

A Family's Share: It's Only $7,000

A U.S. family's share of the national debt is approximately $7,000. With a debt like that, one would not expect to hear, "Oh, it doesn't really matter, because the national debt is something we just owe ourselves."

There are many people who take that attitude, strange as it seems. They should know better, and probably most of them do know better. However, they simply refuse to face the facts about deficit spending and where it will lead.

But facts must be faced.

In a very real sense, government debt is a claim against private property in the same way as an unpaid tax bill: the larger the debt, the smaller is the real equity of individuals in what they think of as their private property.

The size of the debt is important because it measures the amount of money that taxpayers and property owners owe; not to themselves but to a government over which they have lost control to the precise extent that it now owns and controls them. The growing size of the government debt must, therefore, be a matter of very real concern to every creditor and especially to every taxpayer with an interest in keeping his private property and his personal Freedom.

SPENDING WAS NEVER EASY TO STOP

A large part of the national debt has been piled up as a result of government competition with private business. The cost of this competition has been estimated approximately at $40 billion a year. If the federal government would sell shares of stock in government-owned corporations to the American people, that loss would be stopped and a long step back could be taken from the downhill path to socialism.

For 30 years, the American people have lived with a dying dollar. Unsound fiscal policies in the government inevitably lead to inflation; yet, the federal government is operating again at a deficit during the current fiscal year and there is no likelihood that it will escape another deficit next year unless federal spending is drastically reduced.

The American people have watched the process of inflation without making an organized and effective protest because its effects have been largely concealed. However, the effects cannot be concealed forever. What is the use of having more and more dollars in your pocketbook if those dollars are, year after year, worth less and less? That kind of arrangement is bound to end in disaster sooner or later, and we have to think that the danger is near rather than far. The American people have suffered too long from a round of spending, followed by a round of taxes, followed by a new spending, followed by another round of taxes, each one larger than the one that came before.

Government spending needs to be cut and a start needs to be made on reducing the size of the national debt. There are some very specific reasons why it is imperative that these needs be met by the government during the coming year.

To start with, it has to be recognized that spending in itself is not a remedy for any of our economic troubles. That is contrary to the theories of the big spenders, but it is a fact just the same.

Heavy spending by the government does have an impact on the national, economy, but is it a good impact, one that adds strength to the economy? No. Has government spending cured any economic problems up to this time? No. Will it ever cure any? No.

Even when so-called emergency spending to meet economic problems has a temporarily soothing and lulling effect, it is followed after a year or so by all kinds of distortions in the economic system which make the last state of the sick economy much worse than the first. This has been proved time again since the U.S. started trying to spend itself out of the depression of the 1930's. Multiplied billions of dollars were poured out for all kinds of projects, but the depression stayed with us until the demands of war and preparation for war put our production facilities to work.

Another compelling reason for reducing the federal government's reckless outlay of the people's money is that the big spenders have shown that they do not have the ability to manage and guide the sectors of the economy which they take over one by one. Repeatedly we read and hear stories of scandals and near-scandals in federal - supported welfare. Public housing has been a flat failure in its state purpose of providing decent living accommodations for poor people. The foreign policy foisted on the nation by big spenders has been enormously costly in money and friends. Here, again, big spending has been failure.

A third reason why government spending must be reduced is that taxes are used "to get support for greater spending." It is they who are behind the propaganda that this is not the right time to make really significant cuts in spending; it would be too hard to do so now. But the fact is that it will never be any easier. Now is the time to begin, because the future will bring even more tangled and difficult problems.

A necessary beginning is for Congress to regain control of the total budget. Gradually, the Executive Branch has taken control of the total budget from Congress and has held onto it. To be sure, Congress still votes huge appropriations, agency by agency, but it no longer has control over total appropriations.

Once congressional control is regained, new spending programs ought to be blocked. There is much talk of this or that "necessary" new activity by the federal government, but the truth is that there is no proposed new program of spending that the American people can't get along without.

Spending by the numerous welfare agencies has gone beyond reason and should be slashed. The Agriculture Department, the business control bureaus and agencies, federal aid to education; these and many others offer fertile fields for sane economy in the conduct of the federal government.

The Constructive approach calls for a reduction in federal spending that will be really felt, not at some time far distant in the future, but in 1967. As this is a matter of continuing concern to each individual it is hoped that he will make it a matter of continuing study. It is urgent every American learn all he can, from every available source, about where the fiscal policies of the federal government are leading the country . . . .

"No, it won't do," she sighed. "This is a gift from my husband, and I think what he has in mind is black lined with me!"

Backed Labor Bills Pass

JEFFERSON CITY (AP) — The Missouri House passed and sent to the governor today two bills that have the support of organized labor.

One would increase maximum weekly benefits of unemployment compensation from $45 to $53 next January and to $57 in 1970.

There was no discussion as the House accepted a Senate amendment and passed the bill 124-28.

The other measure would force government agencies to discuss wages, hours and other working conditions with representatives of the employes but any results would not be binding on either the workers or management.

He said it would "force the agency heads to sit down and talk with the employes—discuss the issues." He said the State Highway Department and some colleges, especially, had refused in recent months to negotiate with their workers.

The word negotiate was taken out of the bill by Senate amendment and replaced with the word discuss. Garrett said he saw no difference—just a matter of words.

He said it was not the bill "we wanted but we're happy with it."

Either party to the discussion could take its complaints to the State Board of Mediation or to the circuit court under terms of the bill.

Both measures were amended by the Senate Tuesday.

The unemployment compensation bill was changed to take out the so-called "escalator clause" recommended by Gov. Warren E. Hearnes.

It would set unemployment compensation rates each year at half the average weekly wage in Missouri. The average now is $111 so the unemployment compensation benefits would be set at $55.50 a week.

But the State Chamber of Commerce and the Associated Industries organization opposed that provision so violently the Senate change was made as a compromise.

There was only one amendment to that bill and it was adopted by the House on a 144-7 vote.

There were six amendments to the management-employe discussion bill and they were all adopted on a single vote by the House, 135-15.

The House passed and sent to the Senate a bill to make it possible for the State Tax Commission to come into a county and re-evaluate all property assessments if a political sub-division requests it or if the commission finds there is a variation of 25 per cent from normal.

The bill took up a full day of debate earlier when it was before the House for amendment but Rep. Don Kennedy, D-Nevada, the bill's sponsor, managed to stave off changes.

Rep. Earl L. Sponsler, D-Cabool, said in supporting the bill he is almost sorry to have to vote for it but re-assessment must be done and it is up to the legislature to authorize it.

Rep. William C. Phelps, R-Kansas City, said there hasn't been a re-assessment in Jackson County since 1940 and he is certain one is needed.

It had been an unusually quiet evening at our Fire Alarm Center when suddenly a distraught female voice came in over the emergency phone line.

"My poor Persian cat," the caller cried, "has been up in my walnut tree all day and can't get down. Please send a fire truck and ladder right away."

The operator on duty patiently explained that the policy of rescuing cats from trees had been discontinued 30 years ago because cats had proved their ability to get down from trees by themselves.

The woman insisted, pointing out that she paid taxes for our salaries, and wound up telling us how her pet would starve to death in the tree if we didn't come immediately and rescue him.

The operator's classic answer came over the loudspeaker in every firehouse in our city;

A Family's Share: It's Only $7,000

A U.S. family's share of the national debt is approximately $7,000. With a debt like that, one would not expect to hear, "Oh, it doesn't really matter, because the national debt is something we just owe ourselves."

There are many people who take that attitude, strange as it seems. They should know better, and probably most of them do know better. However, they simply refuse to face the facts about deficit spending and where it will lead.

But facts must be faced.

In a very real sense, government debt is a claim against private property in the same way as an unpaid tax bill; the larger the debt, the smaller is the real equity of individuals in what they think of as their private property.

The size of the debt is important because it measures the amount of money that taxpayers and property owners owe; not to themselves but to a government over which they have lost control to the precise extent that it now owns and controls them. The growing size of the government debt must, therefore, be a matter of very real concern to every creditor and especially to every taxpayer with an interest in keeping his private property and his personal Freedom.

SPENDING WAS NEVER EASY TO STOP

A large part of the national debt has been piled up as a result of government competition with private business. The cost of this competition has been estimated approximately at $40 billion a year. If the federal government would sell shares of stock in government-owned corporations to the American people, that loss would be stopped and a long step back could be taken from the downhill path to socialism.

For 30 years, the American people have lived with a dying dollar. Unsound fiscal policies in the government inevitably lead to inflation; yet, the federal government is operating again at a deficit during the current fiscal year and there is no likelihood that it will escape another deficit next year unless federal spending is drastically reduced.

The American people have watched the process of inflation without making an organized and effective protest because its effects have been largely concealed. However, the effects cannot be concealed forever. What is the use of having more and more dollars in your pocketbook if those dollars are, year after year, worth less and less? That kind of arrangement is bound to end in disaster sooner or later, and we have to think that the danger is near rather than far. The American people have suffered too long from a round of spending, followed by a round of taxes, followed by a new spending, followed by another round of taxes, each one larger than the one that came before.

Government spending needs to be cut and a start needs to be made on reducing the size of the national debt. There are some very specific reasons why it is imperative that these needs be met by the government during the coming year.

To start with, it has to be recognized that spending in itself is not a remedy for any of our economic troubles. That is contrary to the theories of the big spenders, but it is a fact just the same.

Heavy spending by the government does have an impact on the national, economy, but is it a good impact, one that adds strength to the economy? No. Has government spending cured any economic problems up to this time? No. Will it ever cure any? No.

Even when so-called emergency spending to meet economic problems has a temporarily soothing and lulling effect, it is followed after a year or so by all kinds of distortions in the economic system which make the last state of the sick economy much worse than the first. This has been proved time again since the U.S. started trying to spend itself out of the depression of the 1930's. Multiplied billions of dollars were poured out for all kinds of projects, but the depression stayed with us until the demands of war and preparation for war put our production facilities to work.

Another compelling reason for reducing the federal government's reckless outlay of the people's money is that the big spenders have shown that they do not have the ability to manage and guide the sectors of the economy which they take over one by one. Repeatedly we read and hear stories of scandals and near-scandals in federal - supported welfare. Public housing has been a flat failure in its state purpose of providing decent living accommodations for poor people. The foreign policy foisted on the nation by big spenders has been enormously costly in money and friends. Here, again, big spending has been failure.

A third reason why government spending must be reduced is that taxes are used "to get support for greater spending." It is they who are behind the propaganda that this is not the right time to make really significant cuts in spending; it would be too hard to do so now. But the fact is that it will never be any easier. Now is the time to begin, because the future will bring even more tangled and difficult problems.

A necessary beginning is for Congress to regain control of the total budget. Gradually, the Executive Branch has taken control of the total budget from Congress and has held onto it. To be sure, Congress still votes huge appropriations, agency by agency, but it no longer has control over total appropriations.

Once congressional control is regained, new spending programs ought to be blocked. There is much talk of this or that "necessary" new activity by the federal government, but the truth is that there is no proposed new program of spending that the American people can't get along without.

Spending by the numerous welfare agencies has gone beyond reason and should be slashed. The Agriculture Department, the business control bureaus and agencies, federal aid to education; these and many others offer fertile fields for sane economy in the conduct of the federal government.

The Constructive approach calls for a reduction in federal spending that will be really felt, not at some time far distant in the future, but in 1967. It is urgent every American learn all he can, from every available source, about where the fiscal policies of the federal government are leading the country . . . .

Backed Labor Bills Pass

JEFFERSON CITY (AP) — The Missouri House passed and sent to the governor today two bills that have the support of organized labor.

One would increase maximum weekly benefits of unemployment compensation from $45 to $53 next January and to $57 in 1970.

There was no discussion as the House accepted a Senate amendment and passed the bill 124-28.

The other measure would force government agencies to discuss wages, hours and other working conditions with representatives of the employes but any results would not be binding on either the workers or management.

He said it would "force the agency heads to sit down and talk with the employes—discuss the issues." He said the State Highway Department and some colleges, especially, had refused in recent months to negotiate with their workers.

The word negotiate was taken out of the bill by Senate amendment and replaced with the word discuss. Garrett said he saw no difference—just a matter of words.

He said it was not the bill "we wanted but we're happy with it."

Either party to the discussion could take its complaints to the State Board of Mediation or to the circuit court under terms of the bill.

Both measures were amended by the Senate Tuesday.

The unemployment compensation bill was changed to take out the so-called "escalator clause" recommended by Gov. Warren E. Hearnes.

It would set unemployment compensation rates each year at half the average weekly wage in Missouri. The average now is $111 so the unemployment compensation benefits would be set at $55.50 a week.

But the State Chamber of Commerce and the Associated Industries organization opposed that provision so violently the Senate change was made as a compromise.

There was only one amendment to that bill and it was adopted by the House on a 144-7 vote.

There were six amendments to the management-employe discussion bill and they were all adopted on a single vote by the House, 135-15.

The House passed and sent to the Senate a bill to make it possible for the State Tax Commission to come into a county and re-evaluate all property assessments if a political sub-division requests it or if the commission finds there is a variation of 25 per cent from normal.

Rep. Earl L. Sponsler, D-Cabool, said in supporting the bill he is almost sorry to have to vote for it but re-assessment must be done and it is up to the legislature to authorize it.

Rep. William C. Phelps, R-Kansas City, said there hasn't been a re-assessment in Jackson County since 1940 and he is certain one is needed.
